PREFACE

THIS volume contains a roll of the Proceedings of the Justices of the Peace, holding sessions in Oxford in 1390–4 under the Statutes of Labourers; also rolls of the courts for the Assise of Bread and Ale between the years 1309 and 1351; and lastly the rolls of Proctors' Accounts 1464 to 1497. All the University Archives to the year 1485 are now in print except Registrum Aa (the Register of Congregations 1448–1463) and Registrum Aaa (the Chancellor's Register 1434–1469).

The Society has been fortunate to secure a short Introduction for the first roll from Miss B. H. Putnam, of Mount Holyoke College, Mass., U.S.A., who issued in 1908 a volume on The Enforcement of the Statutes of Labourers (Columbia University Studies in History, vol. xxxii), and is a well-known authority on the Statutes of Labourers and the mediaeval Justices of the Peace. It is a satisfaction that she considers that the roll, long though it is, was well worth printing. She undertook the task at a very busy time, and the thanks of the Society are due to her.

INTRODUCTION

THE STATUTES OF LABOURERS

THIS huge roll—as bulky as a Tudor Patent roll—contains the fullest proceedings before justices of the peace thus far discovered for either the fourteenth or the fifteenth century.[1] But full though the proceedings are, they relate to but one phase of the activities of the Oxford justices, namely, to their responsibilities for the enforcement of the labour laws within the City of Oxford and its suburbs.[2] The seven sessions here recorded—one in 1390, two in 1391, three in 1392, and one in 1394[3]—thus represent the most complete account hitherto known of actions on the statutes of labourers in the local courts. A comparison of these sessions with the similar ones held between 1349–59[4] shows that in the intervening thirty years there have been only slight changes in procedure. The constables do not any longer—at least in Oxford—make presentments themselves[5] but are required to produce a list of all labourers in their bailiwicks,[6] whether under suspicion or

[1] Cf. the extracts in Putnam, Enforcement of the Statutes of Labourers, app. 166–9, 197–203, 211–13, 228–9, and the lists printed in Eng. Hist. Review, xxviii. 321–30; xxix. 479–99. A few other rolls earlier than 1485 have since come to light and will be described in my forthcoming volume on The Origin and Development of Sixteenth-century Treatises for Justices of the Peace.

[2] There are in existence two sets of records of justices of the peace for the county, as distinct from the city, of Oxford; Assize Roll 717, 10–11 Richard II and Ancient Indictments 99, 13 (?) and 21 Richard II, both mentioned in the lists in the Eng. Hist. Review.

[3] pp. 1, 16, 67, 72, 77, 97, 116. It is puzzling to find no records for 1393; probably they were formerly in the 'baga' mentioned on p. 123.

[4] Listed in my article on Justices of Labourers in Eng. Hist. Review, xxi. 517–38, and described in Statutes of Labourers, pt. 1, ch. 1, with extracts printed in the app. To the above lists must be now added the small fragment of an Oxford roll for 1355–6, printed infra, pp. 125–7.

not,[1] while in each district twelve jurors (out of a panel of eighteen) make the presentments, 'accusing' some, 'excusing' others,[2] or report that none are guilty.[3] The presence of the accused is secured through the usual writs; venire facias, attachies, distringas, capias, and exigi facias.[4] A large number admit their guilt and are in mercy, the fines being recorded,[5] while others demand a jury trial. Of the latter, some are convicted,[6] but a great many are acquitted,[7] more, I think, than in the earlier period.[8] A distinctive fact, however, about the Oxford procedure is the frequency with which the accused admit the amount received or given and leave to the justices the question as to whether it was legal;[9] the significance of this method will appear later.

As is natural in city sessions, few agricultural labourers[10] are mentioned—certainly fewer than in the earlier records for counties as a whole[11]—but the variety of crafts represented is very great, affording a vivid picture of the economic life of Oxford, and effectually disproving the old theory that the labour legislation affected chiefly workers in husbandry.[12]

A striking feature of the Oxford method of enforcing the law is the equality of treatment accorded to masters and servants. In many instances the jurors present labourers for taking 'excess' wages, adding that they 'do not know from whom',[13] but very frequently, far more so than in the earlier sessions, they give a double list, including the servants who received, and the masters who gave, the 'excess' wages.[14] As previously,[15] it appears that the guilty are permitted to give surety for each other for the payment of their penalties—masters for their servants,[1] masters for other masters,[2] servants for other servants.[3] A curious instance is recorded where twelve jurors actually indict four of their own number![4]

Except for a few examples of the vague phrase 'trespass against the ordinance and statute',[5] and for one action on the compulsory service clause[6] and one on the contract clause[7] of the ordinance of 1349, the innumerable cases dealt with relate to the giving or receiving 'excess' wages or the taking of 'excess' prices.[8] Evidently, therefore, the Oxford justices of the reign of Richard II are following their predecessors in concentrating their energies on the attempt to enforce those clauses of the labour legislation that turn merely on questions of fact,[9] instead of trying to deal with the more difficult questions of law involved in the contract clause and to a lesser extent in the compulsory service clause.[10]

The roll contains such a veritable mine of information on the names, residences, and occupations of the inhabitants of Oxford in the years 1390–4, and such abundant details of rates of wages—by the day, the week, or the year—and the prices of so many commodities, that it merits the most careful study from the point of view of local and of economic history. In addition, the proceedings throw light on two important problems of the organization of the office of justice of the peace and of the administration of the labour laws connected with the legislation enacted just before the beginning of the Oxford sessions. The problems can only be indicated here; their solution will involve a thorough study of a great mass of material.

The famous statute passed at Cambridge in September 1388 contains seven chapters on labourers, beggars, rates of wages, &c., with the provision that the law is to be enforced by the justices of the peace,[1] and one chapter on the justices, specifying the number on each commission, the amount of their salaries, the length of quarter sessions, &c.[2] Curiously enough it is not till June 28, 1390,[3] that the statute finds its way into the commission of the peace,[4] there to remain for two centuries.[5] The chapter on justices does not make any change in the organization of the sessions, and apparently it has not hitherto been noted that in the commission of 1390 the experiment was tried of naming a quorum to deal with labour cases that was larger than, and therefore distinct from, the regular quorum for felonies.[6] The second and third commissions of the peace recorded in the Oxford roll—of January 12, 1391,[7] and of October 4, 1392—[8] follow the new form almost exactly, while the first—that of September 3, 1390—accomplishes the same result in a somewhat different fashion.[9] It is, of course, obvious that under this system the justices of the peace would probably, as in Oxford, hold special sessions for labour cases and would therefore be acting precisely as if they were justices of labourers like those appointed between 1352–9, absolutely distinct from justices of the peace.[10] Even though in 1394 the form of the commission again changes and the same justices are to deal with both felonies and labour offences,[11] yet in Oxford apparently the justices continue to hold two sets of sessions, and in the administration of economic legislation during the years 1390–4 show a degree of energy that had not been witnessed since the abolition of the separate commissions for labourers in 1359.[1] This voluminous Oxford roll is thus explained, but the whole subject of the successive changes in the form of the commission of the peace and of their effect on the activities of the justices throughout the country needs further investigation.

The other portion of the Statute of Cambridge to be considered here is the enactment of maximum rates of wages by the year for agricultural labourers, together with an obscurely worded reference to the wages of servants of artificers and victuallers in towns.[2] It might be assumed that these new rates by the year were intended to supersede all the old rates by the day as given in the ordinance of labourers of 1349[3] and in the statute of 1351,[4] but since the specific rates of 1388 are stated only for agricultural labourers, it seems probable that, at least for master artisans, the previous rates must stand.[5] In any case, early in 1390, a new device was tried. The justices of the peace were commanded to proclaim rates of wages once a year,[6] taking into consideration the price of victuals, and also to limit victuallers to reasonable gains.[7] In spite of some ambiguity in phraseology, it seems clear that by this act of 1390 it was intended to repeal the previous statutory maximum rates of wages, and that until the re-imposition of a maximum limit by the act of 1445[8] the justices were left absolutely free to determine rates as they thought best.[9] But with the exception of one assessment for Coventry

[4] 25 Edw. III, st. 2, cc. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

[5] There are many difficulties involved in this subject. For example, in view of the earlier acts, I am unable to explain the introductory statement in c. 4 of the Statute of Cambridge: 'et auxint a cause qe les lowers des ditz Laborers & Servantz nonteste mys en certeyn devant ces heures . . .'.

[6] The better reading does not justify the interpretation of 'twice yearly'.

[7] 13 R. II, st. 1, c. 8, usually referred to as the Statute of 1389, the date according to the old style. In contrast to the Statute of Cambridge, the main emphasis is now on artisans. The justices had had somewhat similar powers given them as far back as 1351; under certain special circumstances, the statutory rates of wages were to be lowered, 'solonc lafferant et discrecion des iustices'; 25 Edw. III, st. 2, c. 4.

[8] 23 Henry VI, c. 12.

[9] This view was first stated by Miss E. A. McArthur in Eng. Hist. Review, ix. 310–14, 554, xiii. 299–302; cf. Cunningham, Growth of English Industry and Commerce, 5th ed., i. 449, note 1. For a contrary opinion, see the valuable article on the Assessment of in 1420, including wages distinctly higher than the statutory rates,[1] and one for Norfolk in 1431,[2] it has not yet been discovered whether the justices were making use of their new powers during the period of freedom from statutory control. It is therefore with peculiar interest that one turns to these Oxford sessions held so soon after the passing of the statute.

There are many references to the statutory rates,[3] or to the rates prevailing before, or just after, the pestilence.[4] There are also various phrases indicating action of the justices:—'per assignacionem iusticiariorum',[5] 'assignantur tantum recipere',[6] 'secundum ordinacionem iusticiariorum',[7] 'sicut iusticiarii ordinare vellent',[8] 'per auisamentum iusticiariorum'.[9] Moreover, a very common method adopted by the accused is that already noted; namely, they state frankly the exact amount received or given as wages, and leave to the 'discretion' of the justices the decision as to its legality.[10] For example, a servant of a tanner admits that he has had 30*s.* a year,[11] a servant of a butcher 20*s.*[12]—high rates as compared with those for agricultural labourers given in the Statute of Cambridge[13]—but both were declared legal by the justices. The latter often demand time to consider: 'datus fuit eis dies ... usque sessiones istas, eo quod iusticiarii inde medio tempore auisiarentur'.[14] In some instances they decide that they have no right to act, as in the case of a dyer: 'eo quod ars illa non potest assederi, ut eis videtur',[15] or of a stonecutter: 'quia capcio talium lathomorum non potest assederi'.[16] In other instances they are prevented from acting because the members of a craft bring into court royal charters, granting them exemption from the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace.[1]

In view of the above evidence it seems probable that the Oxford justices had not yet formed the habit of drawing up schedules of wages, and that whenever possible they were glad to accept as legal the maximum rates already given in the various statutes of labourers.[2] But as a matter of fact (as has already been shown) the statutory rates were by no means clearly stated, except for a few classes of labourers, and in many instances were merely to be the rates that had prevailed in a given locality in normal times.[3] It is therefore natural that with their new powers under the act of 1390 the justices should feel free to exercise their 'discretion' in fixing many rates of wages and of prices, and that such rates should be accepted as legal, perhaps eventually constituting a fairly complete schedule.

Although the problem of early wage assessments is by no means solved, the evidence just described—conflicting though it is—furnishes many interesting suggestions that may eventually lead to a solution, and thus affords additional proof of the importance of these Oxford sessions.

B. H. PUTNAM.

The Introduction by Miss B. H. Putnam has explained the legal side of the roll of 1390–4. If it had been possible to keep the book in type until her Preface had been written, it would have saved me three small errors; first, the heading of the pages should be 'Statutes of Labourers' rather than 'Statute'; secondly, the first note on page 45 is incorrect, and the mention of the 'Annus XX' of Edward III is not a mistake for 'XXIII'; for the twentieth year is expressed in the Ordinance of 1349, as the standard of wages before the pestilence; thirdly, the statement on page 116, lines 30 to 32, is incomplete, for though the clause there mentioned[1] is omitted, its substance is inserted in an earlier sentence, and the words found on p. 18, line 22, are altered in the later commission to 'prosequi volencium audiend' & terminand', ac felonias, transgressiones & forstallarias predictas ac omnia alia superius ad determinandum non declarata ad sectam nostram tantum', &c. The later commission therefore is the same in substance as the earlier, with this difference, that in the earlier commission when cases of felony were tried either Robert Cherleton or John Hulle must be present; but in the later commission all those who try cases under the Statutes of Labourers are considered fit to judge cases of felony.

[1] pp. 90, 95–6.

[2] Of course, there is nothing in the act of 1390 to prevent the acceptance of the old rates if they seemed suitable.

[3] It certainly would not be easy for the justices to obtain from the three acts of 1349, 1351, and 1388 a complete schedule of wages. Moreover, the problem is complicated by the difficulty of comparing rates of wages by the day with those by the year.

There remains to say something about the value of the roll for local history. For this purpose it should be compared with the roll for the Poll Tax of 1380, which is printed in Oxford City Documents (O. H. S.), pp. 1–45. In that roll the collection is by the four wards, and as the names are evidently in geographical order we have an idea where each person lived, and with the help of other records we often know the exact spot. Thus John Wadyn, smith, who appears in our record as dwelling in NE. Ward (pp. 4, 40, 78) and giving excessive wages, is found in the Poll Tax of 1380 as living near East Gate with a wife and two male servants, and by the help of the Cartulary of the Hospital of St. John we know that the actual spot was the corner of Long Wall and High Street, now occupied by Magdalen College School. In like manner John Hickes, alderman, who was of the NW. Ward in 1390–4 (pp. 12, 43, 79, 120), lived in 1380 in the same ward not far from the Castle, being a spicer, with an apprentice, four men servants, and two women servants,[2] and by the help of a New College deed we know that his house was at the corner of Queen Street and New Inn Hall Lane, immediately to the east of the church; while John Lepere, baker, of the same ward, who appears in our roll with as many as six male servants (p. 43), and was a continual offender (pp. 12, 43, 79, 119), lived in 1380 immediately on the west side of the church and had five male servants and one female. In some cases a man has moved from one ward to another between 1380 and 1390, and in other cases he has more servants by the later date; but in very many cases there has been little change in either point.

We are somewhat astonished at the large number of servants, and all the more when we remember that, as we see by the Poll Tax of 1380, they were unmarried. The largest number was kept by Reginald the Tanner, who is known to have lived in Brewers Street, towards its western end. He had at least fourteen male servants and one female in 1391 (p. 9); in 1380 he had eight male servants.[1] The Poll Tax of 1380 shows that of the whole population of Oxford above the age of fifteen about a quarter were unmarried servants, who lived in their masters' houses, receiving board and clothing and a yearly wage. While the list of masters, as given in the Poll Tax, is better than in our roll, because it tells us the trade of each master, our roll is the better as regards servants, for it gives us in many cases the occupation of the servant; and we learn how many of them were brewers for their masters. Thus Reginald the Tanner, though he was a tanner by trade, as his name suggests and as is stated in our roll (p. 14), had five servants who were brewers, and in the same list (p. 10) John Shaw, who was a fishmonger, had two servants who were brewers. The rolls of the Assise of Ale which are printed in this volume show what a large number brewed ale and sold it; it was a supplementary trade which nearly every one followed; but it was becoming a specialized trade, and we have William Ottemore and John Cade described as brewers (pp. 42, 43), implying that they followed no other trade.

As Miss Putnam notices, the burgesses had no agricultural servants. Reginald the Tanner had a carter, but this would be necessary for fetching the skins from the neighbouring villages; he was not a farm carter; and there is no evidence that there were farm buildings within Oxford at any time. The Master of the Hospital of St. John alone in this roll has farm servants; but he was in occupation of more than a hundred acres and naturally had farm servants. Even in Northgate Hundred there is no mention of masters or servants engaged in agriculture.

Where we find servants described as hosteler or tapster we may assume that their master kept an inn. In many cases we know this is the case; thus Richard Battesyn (p. 10), of the SW. Ward, no doubt was the landlord of Battes Inn, which was subsequently the Fleur de Luce; and Nicholas Saundresdone (p. 11) had a large inn on the south side of the Gild Hall.

At the Sessions of the Justices presentments were made not only of masters and servants hired by the year, but also of workmen (operarii) who charged in excess for a day's work. These workmen are almost entirely connected with the building trade. In 1390 there are 12 masons, 12 carpenters, 1 plumber, 9 slatters, 1 dauber, 1 waller (i. e. builder of dry walls), and 3 labourers who were probably masons' labourers. The only other occupations that occur are 1 thatcher (p. 81), 1 sawyer (p. 81), 2 brewers (p. 78) who no doubt were hired by the day to assist at the brewing of beer, and 2 coopers (pp. 39, 81) who would be hired to repair barrels and vats.

Presentments were also made, though not at the earlier sessions, of artificers who charged in excess for goods that they produced—cordwainers, tailors, skinners, tanners, smiths, a patenmaker, goldsmiths, weavers, dyers, and fourbours[1] (pp. 82, 102, 121, 123). There is nothing remarkable about the districts in which they are found, except that the number of cordwainers in Northgate Hundred is worth notice (p. 102). The Poll Tax of 1380 gives the explanation, for it shows that there was a collection of shoemakers at the corner of George Street and St. Mary Magdalen Street, and another in Parks Road opposite Wadham College. In the Poll Tax they are called sutores; here they are cordewanarii; but the names are synonymous, though cordwainer was probably the higher title.

[1] This trade, which is frequently mentioned in old deeds, is described in N. E. D. as the trade of 'furbishing' armour; probably it means one who sells armour.

This roll gives us the names of a few constables, an office of which it so happens that we have little information in Oxford. We learn here that there were two constables for the north suburb, probably one was for the Manor of Northgate, the other for the Godstow Manor of Bradmore, which included the greater part of the parish of St. Giles. The two manors of North and South Oseney, and the manors of Walton and Binsey must have belonged to the sessions for the county, as they do not appear in our roll; and even the north suburb does not appear in the earlier sessions of this roll.

North-Est Warde, retornum factum inde per vicecomitem die Mercurii proximo post festum sancti Gregorii anno xiiii°

Mar. 15, 1391 Ad quem diem Mercurii proximo post festum sancti Gregorii pape pretextu dicti precepti &c., dictus uicecomes retornauit quod de predictis accusatis coram predictis iusticiariis in predicta prima commissione nominatis, Rogerus Bakere, Nicholaus Kent, magister hospitalis sancti Iohannis extra portam orientalem Oxonie, Alicia relicta Iohannis Veyn & Iohannes Spencer de Cattestrete districti sunt & manucapti, viz. quilibet eorum per Iohannem Hert, Willelmum Rede, Iohannem Prat & Nicholaum Estone. Retornauit eciam de exi*tibus* terrarum cuiuslibet eorundem districtorum, preter de exitu terre dicti magistri, iiii d.[2] & de exitu terre predicti magistri xl d. De quibus districtis, ut predicitur, dicto die Mercurii proximo post festum sancti Gregorii comparuerunt videlicet Rogerus Bakere, Nicholaus Kent, magister hospitalis sancti Iohannis extra portam orientalem Oxonie & Alicia relicta Iohannis Veyne, de quibus predicti Rogerus Bakere, Nicholaus Kent & Alicia relicta &c. non potuerunt dedicere transgressiones predictas & posuerunt se in gracia regis, quorum fines patent, ut sequntur, videlicet, De Rogero Bakere pro excessu dato per plegium Nicholai Kent & Stephani Palmere xii d.

De Nicholao Kent pro eodem per plegium Ade de la Ryuere & Willelmi Newman xii d.

De Alicia relicta Iohannis Veyne pro eodem per plegium Willelmi Gerueys & Iohannis Milton skynnere vi d.

Et quo ad execucionem faciendam versus Iohannem Wadyn smyth vicecomes nullum preceptum retornavit. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti, sicut alias, quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem predictam quin distringat predictum Iohannem Wadyn per omnes terras &c., ita quod nec ipse &c., et quod habeat corpus eius coram predictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum ad respondendum domino regi de transgressionibus predictis &c.

Et ulterius preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem predictam [quin][1] venire faciat coram predictis nunc iusticiariis ad diem & locum illos omnes seruientes dicti Iohannis Wadyn pro quibus coram predictis nuper iusticiariis idem Iohannes accusatus fuit, ut supra dictum est, quorum nomina superius non declarantur &c., ita quod dictus uicecomes tunc ibidem habeat eorum nomina. Et dictus magister predicti hospitalis sancti Iohannis venit & respondit & dicit ut inferius patet, scilicet quando seruientes sui predicti respond*ent* &c.

Et predictus Iohannes Spencer de Cattestrete non venit. Ideo exitus terrarum suarum predict*arum* foris*factus* &c. Et dicti manucaptores sui in misericordia (IIII d.), quia ipsum non habuerunt &c. Et super hoc preceptum est dicto vicecomiti, sicut alias, quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem predictam quin distringat predictum Iohannem Spencer de Cattestrete per omnes terras &c., ita quod nec ipse &c., et quod de exit*ibus* &c., et quod habeat corpus eius coram dictis iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Sabati proximo post festum sancti Mathei proximo futurum ad respondendum domino regi de transgressionibus predictis &c.

Et isto eodem die Mercurii &c. predicti Willelmus Broun, Iohannes Sampson & Iohannes Grove lathomi qui per dictos iusticiarios in dicta prima commissione nominatos in ultimis sessionibus suis certis de causis super statu & capcione eorundem lathomorum per certam manucapcionem habuerunt diem essendi hic isto die Mercurii, modo venerunt. Et quo ad predictos Willelmum Broun & Iohannem Groue super statu, sapientia & capcione[2] eorundem examinatos, per eorum confessionem & discrecionem iusticiariorum predictorum iidem Willelmus & Iohannes excessiue ceperunt &c., & hoc non potuerunt dedicere set posuerunt se in gracia regis; quorum fines sequntur inferius, videlicet,

De Iohanne Grove lathomo pro eodem per plegium Iohannis Walsyngham & Willelmi Wyndel xii d.

Et quo ad predictum Iohannem Sampson, pro eo quod ipse est

Et quo ad predictum Iohannem Sampsone pro eo quod ipse est magister lathomus liberarum petrarum & valde sapien& subtilis in arte illa & de entaille & quia capcio talium lathomorum non potest assederi cum capcione aliorum lathomorum status alterius & gradus propter altitudinem discrecionis & sapiencie artis illius, per discrecionem iusticiariorum predictorum dimissus est.

Et dictus Iohannes Plomer dicit quod ipse a tempore ultime sessionis predictorum iusticiariorum in predicta priori commissione nominatorum usque sessionem hanc sicut homines de arte illa qua iam utitur, viz. de plomer, receperunt annis xx^o^ [1], xxiiii^o^, xxv^to^ & xxvi^to^ regis Edwardi aui regis nunc & non aliter,[2] & de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto uicecomiti ut inferius &c.

Et super capcione & statu Iohannis Sulby coupere certis de causis datus est ei dies coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam ad proximam sessionem eorundem iusticiariorum &c.

Retornauit eciam dictus uicecomes quod de predictis magistris & seruitoribus Iohannes Wadyn smyth & Willelmus Smyth & Thomas Fyfhide seruientes eiusdem Iohannis, Iohannes Sprount & WillelmusGodhyne & Iohannes Arundel seruientes eiusdem Iohannis Sprount, Thomas Mayster & Thomas Cartere & Iohannes Cartere seruientes eiusdem Thome Maister, Iohanna relicta Iohannis Curreour, Iohannes seruiens eiusdem Iohanne, Ricardus Iremongere & Cristiana seruiens eius attachiati sunt per plegium Willelmi Pope & Ricardi Cut; qui omnes uenerunt. Et de quibus predictus Thomas Mayster dicit quod conuenit cum predictis Thoma Cartere & Iohanne Cartere seruientibus suis quod eis daret prout liceret sibi eis dare secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum &c., & non aliter, nec aliquid eis alio modo dedit & de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Et dicti Thomas Cartere & Iohannes Cartere dicunt quod conuenerunt cum predicto Thoma Maister magistro quod ipsi de eo acciperent prout eis liceret recipere secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid de eo alio modo receperunt, & de hoc ponunt se super patriam. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti, ut inferius &c.

Et de quibus dictus Iohannes Wadyn smyth dicit quod conuenit Memb. 13 cum dictis seruientibus suis quod eis daret prout sibi liceret eis dare secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum in hoc casu prouisorum & non aliter, nec aliquid eis alio modo dedit; & de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Et dicti Willelmus Smyth & Thomas Fyfhide dicunt quod conuenerunt cum predicto Iohanne Wadyn magistro suo quod ipsi de eo acciperent prout eis liceret accipere secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid de eo alio modo receperunt, & de hoc ponunt se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto uicecomiti ut inferius &c.

[1] The figures of the scribe seem to be confused here.
[2] The verb is omitted.

Et dicti Willelmus Godhyne & Iohannes Arundell seruientes Iohannis Sprunt dicunt quod conuenerunt cum dicto Iohanne Sprunt magistro suo quod ipsi de eo acciperent prout eis liceret recipere, secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid de eo alio modo receperunt, & de hoc ponunt se separatim super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est vicecomiti predicto &c., ut inferius. Et dictus Iohannes Sprunt dicit ut seruientes sui predicti &c. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti, ut inferius, &c.

Et quo ad execucionem faciendam versus predictum Willelmum Dageville, Iohannem Groue brewer & omnes alios seruientes suos, Willelmum Codestone & seruientes suos & Willelmum Herne & seruientes suos causa accusacionis antedicte, dictus vicecomes nullum preceptum retornauit &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti, sicut alias, quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem in balliua sua quin venire faciat coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum predictos Willelmum Dageville & seruientes suos predictos ac dictum Willelmum Codesdone & seruientes suos & eciam Willelmum Herne & seruientes suos ad respondendum domino regi singillatim de transgressionibus antedictis &c. Et quod habeat ibidem eodem die omnia nomina seruientum illorum imbreuiat' & preceptum suum &c.

Et predicta Iohanna relicta Iohannis Curreour dicit quod dictus Iohannes seruiens suus est suus seruiens de arte seu mistera de Curreour, & dicit quod dat sibi per diem quando laborat 1d. & prandium suum &c.; ponit se in discrecione dictorum nunc iusticiariorum &c. Et predictus Iohannes seruiens eiusdem Iohanne dicit sicut ipsa Iohanna dicit, & ponit se similiter in discrecione dictorum nunc iusticiariorum &c. Et super hoc datus eis dies coram dictis iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum &c.

Et predictus Ricardus Iremongere dicit quod conuenit cum Cristiana seruiente eius quod ei daret sicut ei liceret per formam statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid ei alio modo dedit, & de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et dicta Cristiana dicit quod ipsa cum dicto magistro suo sic conuenit scilicet quod de [eo][1] reciperet sicut ei per dicta statuta recipere liceret &c., & non aliter, nec aliquid de eo alio modo recepit, & de hoc ponit se similiter super patriam. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem predictam quin venire faciat coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche proximo futurum xviii probos & legales homines de dictis villa & suburb' &c, qui nec &c. ad faciendum omnes iuratas istas &c.

Et dicti Gilbertus Fournour & Gylmyn seruientes predicti Iohannis Walkere bakere dicunt quod quilibet eorum capit pro le Bache ii d. & quod non capiunt plus ponunt se super patriam. Et dictus Iohannes Walkere dicit quod non dat eis plus, & hoc ponit se super patriam. Memb. 14

Ideo preceptum est vicecomiti &c., ut inferius patet &c. Et Willelmus Hembury bakere & Willelmus Cadewyn seruiens eiusdem Willelmi Hembury, Willelmus Bartone bakere & Iohannes Deryng & Thomas Fournour seruientes eiusdem Willelmi Bartone dicunt videlicet magistri quod non dederunt dictis seruientibus suis excessiue &c., & de hoc ponunt se super patriam &c. Et dicti seruientes quod non ceperunt de dictis magistris suis excessiue &c. Et de hoc ponunt se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius &c. Et dictus Robertus seruiens dicti Iohannis Lyllyng dicit quod capit per annum x s. in toto, & est seruiens eiusdem Iohannis in arte sua de bakere, & ponit se in discrecionem iusticiariorum si excessiue &c. Et sic per assignacionem iusticiariorum concessum est ei capere &c. Et dictus Iohannes Walsyngham masone dicit quod conuenit cum Iohanne Hosteler seruiente suo quod ei daret secundum id quod ei liceret dare per ordinacionem statutorum &c., & nichil ei alio modo dedit, & de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Et dictus Iohannes Hosteler seruiens dicti Iohannis Walsyngham dicit quod sic est ut magister suus predictus dicit, & quod aliter non est nec aliter de eo aliquid cepit, ponit se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum dicto vicecomiti ut inferius &c. Et quo ad dictum Iohannem seruientem dicti Iohannis Hosteler predicti Iohannes Walsyngham & Iohannes Hosteler dicunt quod capit per annum VI s. VIII d. & sic non excessiue, & quod non capit plus ponunt se tam mag*ister* quam seru*ientes* super patriam. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius &c. Et dicti Iohannes Strettone bakere dicit quod non dedit dictis Iohanni Iolyf & Gilberto Man nisi secundum ordinac*ionem* statut*i*, & de hoc ponit se super patriam tam magister quam illi duo seruientes &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem supradictam quin venire faciat coram predictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche proximo futurum XVIII probos & legales homines de dictis villa & suburbiis qui predictos magistros & seruientes de warda ista, qui se in iuratas ut predicitur posuerunt, nulla affinitate attingunt &c. ad faciendum recogniciones illas &c. Et quod habeant ibidem eodem die nomina dictorum XVIII imbreuiata & preceptum suum &c.

Retornauit eciam dictus vicecomes quod predictus Reginaldus le Tannere & seruientes sui videlicet Walterus Mun brewer, Willelmus Brewere, Willelmus Irysshe brewere, Robertus Cartere & David Waterman attachiati sunt per plegium Iohannis Herde & Willelmi

Knauet, qui omnes comparuerunt et non potuerunt dedicere transgressiones antedictas, & posuerunt se in gracia regis, & patet finis dicti Reginaldi inferius, videlicet:—

De Reginaldo Tannere pro excessu dato seruientibus &c. per plegium Ricardi Bristowe & Henrici Porter xii d.

Et ulterius isto eodem die Veneris predicti seruientes predicti Reginaldi Tannere ponunt loco suo Ricardum Bristowe ad faciendum coram dictis nunc iusticiariis fines suos pro excessibus predictis &c. unde accusati existunt, & certis de causis datus est dies dicto Ricardo Bristowe attornato eorundem seruientum ad dictos fines faciendum coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum &c.

Et ulterius dictus vicecomes isto eodem die Veneris proximo ante diem dominicam in Ramispalmarum retornauit eciam quod de dictis accusatis de warda ista coram dictis nunc iusticiariis Iohannes Hikkes, & Willelmus Cristemasse, Willelmus Tryllyng & Iohanna Gardyner, seruientes eiusdem Iohannis Hikkes, Iohannes Bernard lokiere, & Thomas Chiltone seruiens eiusdem Iohannis Bernard, Iohannes Page bakere & Iohannes Copy, Robertus Gurbache, Iohannes Irelond & Thomas Pylprest, seruientes eiusdem Iohannis Page, Iohannes Dadyngtone & Constancia seruiens eiusdem Iohannis Dadyngtone, Willelmus Iremongere & Alexander & Willelmus Wyrehale seruientes eiusdem Willelmi Iremongere, Philippus Cornysshe seruiens Willelmi Wygan ferour, Agnes Hawuyle & Iohannes seruiens eiusdem Agnetis attachiati sunt per plegium Iohannis Frende & Willelmi Kete, qui omnes comparuerunt. Et de quibus predictus Iohannes Hikkes dicit quod conuenit cum dictis seruientibus suis scilicet quod eis daret prout sibi liceret eis dare secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum in hoc casu prouisorum & non aliter, nec aliquid eis alio modo dedit, & de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Et dicti Willelmus Cristemasse, Willelmus Trillyng & Iohanna Gardyner seruientes eiusdem Iohannis Hikkes dicunt quod conuenerunt cum predicto Iohanne Hikkes magistro suo quod ipsi de eo acciperent prout eis liceret accipere secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid de eo alio modo receperunt, & de hoc ponunt se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum vicecomiti Oxonie ut inferius &c. Et eciam Iohannes Page bakere & Iohannes Dadyngtone dicunt, videlicet quilibet eorum separatim per se, quod ipse conuenit cum dictis seruientibus &c., scilicet quod eis daret prout sibi liceret eis dare secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid eis alio modo dedit & de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius &c. Et dicti seruientes predictorum Iohannis Page & Iohannis Dadyngtone dicunt, videlicet quilibet separatim per se, quod ipse conuenit cum predicto magistro suo quod ipse de eo reciperet prout ei recipere liceret secundum formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum & non aliter, nec aliquid de eo alio modo recepit, & de hoc ponit se super patriam. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius &c. Et predictus Iohannes Barnard lokeyere dicit quod ipse non dedit Thome Chiltone seruienti suo excessiue contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum, et de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius. Et dictus

Thomas Chiltone dicit quod non recepit de dicto Iohanne Bernard magistro suo excessiue contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum illorum antedictorum &c. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem antedictam quin venire faciat coram dictis iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche proximo futurum xviii probos & legales homines de dictis villa & suburbiis &c. qui dictos magistros nec seruientes suos predictos, qui ut predicitur de ista warda isto die Veneris se miserunt in iuratas predictas & posuerunt, aliqua affinitate attingant, ad faciendum iuratas illas &c., idemque dies dictis magistris & seruientibus suis predictis datus est &c.

Et ulterius causa certarum materiarum allegatarum per dictos Willelmum Iremongere & Alexandrum & Willelmum seruientes eiusdem Willelmi ac Willelmum Wygan ferour & Philippum Cornysshe seruientem eiusdem Willelmi, Agnetem Hawuyle & Iohannem seruientem eiusdem Agnetis &c. datus est eis dies usque proximam sessionem iusticiariorum antedictorum &c.

Et quo ad execucionem faciendam versus dictos Aliciam seruientem Iohannis Cade, Willelmum Merstone iremongere & Aliciam Dorchestre seruientem eiusdem Willelmi pretextu accusacionis antedicte dictus vicecomes nullum isto die retornauit preceptum &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti, sicut alias, quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem antedictam quin venire faciat coram dictis nunc iusticiariis ad proximas sessiones suas, videlicet die Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum, dictos Aliciam, Willelmum & Aliciam ad respondendum domino regi de transgressionibus predictis &c.

Hundredum & suburbium extra portam borialem Oxon.

Et ulterius isto die Sabbati in vigilia dominice in Ramispalmarum dicto anno xiiii° pretextu cuiusdam precepti per dictos nunc iusticiarios dicto vicecomiti ut predicitur nuper directi, idem vicecomes retornauit nomina constabulariorum hundredi & suburbii extra portam borialem Oxonie, et quod eis precepit quod iidem constabularii haberent coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam isto eodem die Sabbati omnia nomina venatorum, operariorum, artificum, seruitorum, hostelariorum, mendicancium & vagabundorum ac aliorum hominum mendicancium, qui se nominant trauaillyngmen, in balliua sua imbreuiata &c. Retornauit eciam dictus vicecomes nomina xviii proborum & legalium hominum de hundredo & suburbio predictis &c. Et patet retornum dicti vicecomitis inferius simul cum retorno constabulariorum illorum, videlicet:—

Iohannes Screveyn & Ricardus Nortone constabularii ibidem isto eodem die Sabbati in vigilia dominice in Ramispalmarum comparuerunt & retornauerunt diuersa nomina operariorum, artificum, seruitorum & hostelariorum de balliua sua, de quibus plures accusati fuerunt per xii de predictis xviii probis hominibus per dictum vicecomitem de hundredo & suburbio istis retornatis. Quorum quidem xii ac omnium accusatorum predictorum de hundredo & suburbio istis nomina patent inferius; in primis de predictis xii, Ricardus Fulk, Ricardus Burghe, Iohannes Hunche, Iohannes Terry, Stephanus Smyth, Iohannes Lokyere, Willelmus Wodestoke, Willelmus Brehulle bakere, Simon Sadelere, Iohannes Ropere, Simon Bradeley & Iohannes Metebourne qui iurati & onerati iuxta formam dictarum posteriorum litterarum domini regis patencium dicunt super sacramentum suum quod, de dictis accusatis in hundredo & suburbio istis, de lathomis Iohannes Bloxham masone, Ricardus Frythe masone, Ricardus Nortone masone, Ricardus Prestone masone & Rogerus Meriot[1] masone; et de sclatteres Willelmus Heyne sclattere, Iohannes Aubel sclattere & Ricardus Basset, ac de carpentariis Nicholaus Carpenter & Ricardus Bekewode sawyere ceperunt par les iourneyes excessiue contra formam statutorum & ordinacionum predictorum a festo sancti Michaelis ultimo nunc preterito usque sessionem hanc; set de quibus personis, dictis iuratis non constat. Et ulterius xii iurati predicti dicunt quod omnes seruientes subscripti retenti cum magistris suis subscriptis per idem tempus ceperunt de dictis magistris suis excessiue contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum, et predicti magistri sui eisdem seruientibus suis dederunt excessiue per idem tempus & soluerunt; quorum magistrorum & seruientum nomina inferius patent, videlicet

Nicholaus Peion — Ricardus seruiens eiusdem

Willelmus Chyselhamptone, bochere { Robertus / Margeria } seruientes eiusdem

Et super hoc isto eodem die Sabbati in vigilia dominice in Ramispalmarum preceptum dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem predictam quin venire faciat coram predictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche proximo futurum omnes accusatos predictos de dictis hundredo & suburbio extra dictam portam borialem Oxonie ad respondendum domino regi de transgressionibus antedictis &c.

Memb. 16 Ad quem diem Martis proximo ante festum Pasche predictus vicecomes retornauit quod de predictis accusatis de dictis hundredo & suburbio de lathomis Iohannes Bloxham masone, Ricardus Frythe masone & Rogerus Masone, masone, & de carpentariis Nicholaus Carpenter & de sclatteres Willelmus Heyne sclattere, Iohannes Aubel sclattere & Ricardus Basset sclattere ac Ricardus Bekewode sawyere attachiati sunt per plegium Iohannis Hert & Willelmi Rede; qui omnes venerunt & non potuerunt dedicere transgressiones predictas, & posuerunt se in gracia regis, quorum fines patent ut sequntur, videlicet:—

De Ricardo Frithe masone pro consimili per plegium Ricardi Nortone & Thome Webbe — viii d.

De Rogero Masone, masone, pro consimili per plegium Ricardi Nortone & Iohannis Scryueyn — xii d.

De Ricardo Bekewode sawyere pro consimili per plegium Nicholai Carpenter & Ricardi Basset — viii d.

De Nicholao Carpenter, carpentario, pro consimili per plegium Ricardi Prestone & Willelmi Lundone — viii d.

De Willelmo Heyne sclattere pro consimili per plegium Iohannis Aubel & Ricardi Basset — viii d.

De Iohanne Aubelle sclattere pro consimili per plegium Thome Webbe & Willelmi Heynes — xii d.

Retornauit eciam dictus vicecomes quod de predictis magistris & seruitoribus de predictis hundredo & suburbio ut predicitur accusatis Alicia Hosteler & Willelmus Solond seruiens eius, Felicia Watlyngtone, Ricardus Burghe bochere, Iohannes Cornysshe & Robertus seruientes eiusdem Ricardi Burghe, Ricardus atte Celere, Isabella Comberdone seruiens eiusdem, Willelmus Ryuelle, Iohannes Cappelane, Willelmus Frensshe & Willelmus Palmes seruientes eiusdem Ricardi atte Celer[1], & Willelmus Chiselhamptone bochere & Robertus & Margeria seruientes eiusdem attachiati sunt per plegium Ricardi Node & Iohannis Kent qui omnes comparuerunt. Et de quibus accusatis dicti Felicia Watlyngtone, Ricardus atte Seler & Isabella Comberdone seruiens eiusdem Ricardi atte Selere non potuerunt dedicere transgressiones antedictas, & posuerunt se in gracia regis, quorum fines patent ut sequntur videlicet :—

De Ricardo atte Selere pro consimili per plegium Willelmi Cook and Willelmi Ryuelle vi d.

De Isabella Comberdone seruiente eiusdem Ricardi pro excessu capto &c. per plegium Willelmi Cook & Willelmi Ryuelle iiii d.

Et dictus Ricardus Burghe bocher non potest dedicere quin conuenit cum dicto magistro[2] suo scilicet de se recipere & habere contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum, & posuit se in gracia regis; quorum magistri & seruientis fines patent ut sequntur videlicet :—

De Ricardo Burghe bocher pro conuencione facta cum Roberto seruiente suo, scilicet sibi dare contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum per plegium Willelmi Newman & Willelmi Hamptone vi d.

De Roberto seruiente Ricardi Burghe predicti pro conuencione secum facta contra statutum &c. per plegium Ricardi Burghe & Iohannis Cornysshe viii d.

Et ulterius predictus Ricardus Burghe bochere dicit quod dat Iohanni Cornysshe seruienti suo predicto per annum in omnibus xvi s.; et dicit quod idem Iohannes est capitalis seruiens & mercator suus in arte de Bocherie, & ponit se in discrecionem iusticiariorum si excessiue &c. Et causa predicta per discrecionem iusticiariorum predictorum consideratum est quod dictus Ricardus Burghe eosdem xvi s. det per annum &c.; et quod non dat predicto Iohanni Cornysshe ultra dictos xvi s., ponit se super patriam. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non &c. ut inferius &c. Et idem Iohannes Cornysshe ponit se similiter super patriam, quod non recipit de dicto magistro suo nisi xvi s. per annum &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius.

[2] serviente is meant.

Et dicta Alicia Hostiler dicit quod dictus Willelmus Solond seruiens suus de se capit per annum integrum x s. in omnibus, & est hostelarius suus &c. Et ponit se in discrecionem iusticiariorum &c. Et per eosdem iusticiarios consideratum est quod liceat dicte Alicie dicto Willelmo sic dare &c., videlicet quamdiu in officio & labore illo eidem Alicie sic seruit &c.; et quod eidem Willelmo similiter liceat de ea sic secundum quod predicitur accipere &c. Et quod dicta Alicia eidem Willelmo Solond non dat plus, et eciam quod dictus Willelmus Solond plus de dicto magistro [sic] suo non capit, ponunt se super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti &c., ut inferius &c.

Et dictus Willelmus Ryuelle dicit quod dat Iohanni Cappelane seruienti suo per annum xiii s. iiii d., & dicit quod est hostelarius suus & sibi de officio illo responsurus &c. Et eciam quod dat dicto Willelmo Frensshe seruienti suo per annum vi s. viii d., & Willelmo Palmes seruienti suo predicto viii s. per annum; et ponit se in discrecionem iusticiariorum &c. si excessiue contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum &c. Et super hoc per discrecionem dictorum nunc iusticiariorum consideratum est quod eidem Willelmo Ryuelle liceat eis sic dare &c.; & quod predictus Willelmus Ryuelle eisdem plus nec alio modo dat, nec quod ipsi seruientes aliquid ultra summas predictas recipiunt &c. tam dictus Willelmus magister quam ipsi iidem seruientes ponunt se singulariter & separatim super patriam &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti ut inferius &c.

Et dictus Willelmus Chyselhamptone & Margeria seruiens eiusdem Ricardi[1] non potuerunt dedicere transgressiones antedictas & posuerunt se in gracia regis, quorum fines patent ut sequntur, videlicet:—

De Willelmo Chyselhamptone bochere pro excessu dato Margerie seruienti sue per plegium Thome Hamptone & Iohannis Hembury vi d.

De Margeria seruiente Willelmi Chyselhamptone pro excessu de dicto magistro suo capto per plegium Willelmi Chyselhamptone & Iohannis Hembury iiii d.

Et quo ad accusacionem super dictum Willelmum Chyselhamptone superius affirmatam causa dicti Roberti seruientis sui, idem Willelmus dicit quod predictus Robertus seruiens suus est capitalis seruiens suus in arte sua de Bocherie, & cum denariis suis mercandizat, & multum laborat & multociens in nimis vili labore in arte predicta &c., & quod dat eidem Roberto per annum xx s., & ponit se in discrecionem dictorum nunc iusticiariorum si excessiue contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum &c. Et causis antedictis &c., consideratum est per dictos nunc iusticiarios quod liceat eidem Willelmo dicto Roberto sic dare & dicto Roberto sic recipere per annum dum taliter facit & agit, ut predicitur &c.; et quod dictus Willelmus nichil ultra denarios predictos predicto Roberto nec aliquid eidem alio modo dat, & quod dictus Robertus de predicto Willelmo aliquid ulterius non recipit per annum, tam dictus magister quam idem seruiens ponunt se super patriam. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem predictam quin venire faciat coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche proximo futurum de dictis villa & suburbio xviii probos & legales homines, qui aliquos aut aliquem aut aliquam de dictis accusatis in dictis hundredo & suburbio qui se in dictas iuratas secundum id quod predicitur posuerunt, ut predictum est, nulla affinitate attingant, ad faciendum iuratas illas &c.

Retornauit eciam dictus vicecomes isto eodem die Sabbati in vigilia dominice in Ramispalmarum quod predicti Ricardus Nortone masone, Ricardus Prestone masone, Iohannes seruiens Felicie Watlyngtone, Nicholaus Peione & Ricardus seruiens eiusdem Nicholai nichil habent in balliua sua per quod possunt attachiari &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem in balliva sua quin capiat omnes istos, sic in parcella ista simul per dictum vicecomitem ad nichil retornatos, ubicumque inuenti fiunt[1] in balliua sua; et eos saluo custodiat &c., ita quod habeat corpora eorum coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum ad respondendum domino regi de transgressionibus antedictis &c.

Et ulterius isto eodem die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche dictus vicecomes pretextu cuiusdam precepti nuper sibi, ut superius fit mencio, directi retornauit nomina xviii proborum hominum de dictis villa & suburbiis, ad faciendum certas iuratas inter dominum regem & certas personas & partes de certis materiis prescriptis &c., & de xii^cim^ dictorum xviii hominum oneratis super iuratis subsequentibus, ut patet inferius, nomina simul cum nominibus personarum & parcium, que in iuratis illis coram dictis iusticiariis hunc diem presentem habuerunt, aperte

[1] Sic; but probably the scribe meant fuerint.

inferius patent, videlicet in primis de dictis xii^cim Iohannes Lundone, Walterus Bocher, Willelmus Swanbourne, Ricardus Sherman, Iohannes Bedewynde, Thomas Waryner, Willelmus Hamptone chaundeler, Thomas Setertone, Robertus Deye skynnere, Iohannes Appelford, Henricus Moryce & Ricardus Broun, qui iurati & onerati iuxta formam materiarum in iuratis illis contentarum dicunt super sacramentum suum quod Iohannes Syluestre non dedit Thome Phelyp & Waltero seruienti suo excessiue, nec Iohannes Shawe excessiue dedit Iohanni Brewere & Thome Brewere seruientibus suis, nec Iohannes Stratford, cook, plus dedit dicte Alicie seruienti sue quam iii s., nec dicte Iohanne seruiente sue plus quam vi s. per annum, prout superius allegauit, nec Philippus Taillour excessiue dedit Alicie seruienti sue predicte, nec Iohanna seruiens Iohannis Clerk, fysshere, plus cepit de dicto Iohanne magistro suo per annum quam v s., sicut superius allegauit, nec Iohannes Dadyngtone excessiue dedit Agneti seruienti sue predicte, nec eadem Agnes de eo excessiue cepit, nec Iohannes Hikkes alderman excessiue dedit Willelmo Cristemasse, Willelmo Trillyng & Iohanne Gardener, nec conuencionem cum eis fecit nisi secundum quod ei liceret per ordinacionem statutorum &c. nec Iohannes Page bakere excessiue dedit dictis seruientibus suis scilicet Iohanni Copy, Ricardo Gurbache, Iohanni Pauy, Iohanni Irelond nec Thome Pilpreste, nisi sicut ei liceret per statuta & hoc per conuencionem, nec iidem seruientes eiusdem Iohannis Page nec aliquis eorum excessiue de dicto magistro suo ceperunt nec cepit, nisi secundum statuta & hoc per conuencionem, nec Iohannes Dadyngtone excessiue dedit Constancie seruienti sue nisi per conuencionem secundum statuta &c., nec eadem Constancia aliter de eo cepit nisi secundum quod eis liceret per ordinacionem statutorum, & hoc per conuencionem. Et sic dicti iurati dicunt quod neque predicti magistri nec eorum seruientes in aliquo contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum deliquerunt, sed omnes persone que placitauerunt verum dixerunt. Ideo consideratum est per Memb. 17 iusticiarios predictos quod omnes illi, qui sic ut predicitur per xii dictos iuratos de accusacionibus predictis liberantur, eant quieti &c. Et ulterius dicti xii iurati dicunt quod predictus Iohannes Trusse, sclattere, excessiue dedit Laurencio seruienti suo contra formam ordinacionum & statutorum predictorum; et quod predictus Laurencius seruiens eiusdem Iohannis excessiue de ipso Iohanne Trusse cepit contra formam eorundem ordinacionum & statutorum, sicut accusati superius fuerunt &c. Et super hoc predicti Iohannes Trusse & Laurencius comparuerunt, & posuerunt se in gracia regis pro trans-

gressione & contemptu predictis &c.; quorum fines ut inferius patet sequntur videlicet:—

De Iohanne Trusse sclattere pro excessu dato Laurencio seruienti suo unde per iuratam convictus est per plegium Iohannis Maltone & Ade Sclattere iiii d.

De Laurencio seruienti predicti Iohannis Trusse pro excessu de eodem capto unde per iuratam convictus est per plegium Iohannis Vente & Iohannis Wodhulle iiii d.

Et ulterius isto eodem die Martis proximo ante festum Pasche preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem in balliua sua quin venire faciat coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum Iohannem Drake & Iohannem Norcote nuper seruientes Michaelis Salesbury, Iohannem Hopkyn seruientem Ricardi Iremongere & Iohannem seruientem Nicholai Nortone ad respondendum domino regi de eo quod ipsi accusati fuerunt, scilicet de excessu capto de dictis magistris suis, & hoc coram dictis iusticiariis in prima dictarum commissionum nominatis &c.

Et quo ad certas iuratas isto eodem die Martis inter dominum regem & quasdam personas super diuersis materiis capiendas, ut superius diuersis uicibus predicte certe persone per assignacionem dictorum iusticiariorum hunc diem presentem habuerunt, dictus vicecomes nullum retornauit preceptum. Ideo dicte iurate remanent capiende pro defectu iuratorum usque diem Sabbati proximo post festum sancti Mathei apostoli proximo futurum &c. Et super hoc preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem in balliua sua quin venire faciat coram dictis iusticiariis apud Oxoniam dicto die Sabbati proximo post dictum festum sancti Mathei apostoli xviii probos & legales homines de dictis villa & suburb*iis* qui dictas partes, que in iuratas illas se posuerunt, nulla affinitate attingant, ad faciendum iuratas illas &c., quarum personarum & parcium nomina ac cause & materie, pro quibus se in iuratas istas, ut predictum est, posuerunt aperte patent in precepto dicto vicecomiti directo &c., & unde ad dictum diem iurati onerati erunt &c.

Et nuper ut superius plene patet preceptum fuit dicto vicecomiti sicut pluries quod non omittat propter aliquam libertatem in balliua sua quin caperet Iohannem Wottone, laborer, Willelmum Nevyle nuper seruientem Nicholai Saundresdone de Oxonia, Michaelem Neel & Henricum Coupere nuper seruientes Iohannis Clerk fysshere de Oxonia, Stephanum Cartere & Thomam Hille nuper seruientes Regi-naldi Tannere de Oxonia, Thomam Cony nuper seruientem Iohannis Utteworthe de Oxonia, Iohannem Hedyndone carpenter, Iohannem Hostiler nuper seruientem Iohannis Charlee de Oxonia, Iohannem nuper seruientem Iohannis Hikkes de Oxonia, Iohannem Kent laborer, Iohannem Clerk nuper seruientem Ricardi Iremongere de Oxonia, Iohannem Cornysshe & Ricardum nuper seruientes Willelmi Dagvile de Oxonia, Willelmum Cartere nuper seruientem Thome Maister, Iohannem nuper seruientem Iohannis White de Oxonia, Aliciam nuper seruientem Philippi Taillour de Oxonia, Iulianam nuper seruientem Iohannis Bereford de Oxonia bochere & Agnetem nuper seruientem Iohannis White de Oxonia, si &c.; et eos &c., ita quod haberet corpora eorum coram predictis iusticiariis apud Oxoniam isto eodem die Martis proximo ante dictum festum Pasche ad respondendum domino regi de diuersis excessibus &c.; unde indict*ati* sunt &c.; qui non ven*erunt* &c. Et dictus vicecomes retornauit quod non sunt inuenti in balliua sua &c. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod exigi faciat predictos Iohannem Wottone laborer, Willelmum Neuyle, Michaelem Neel[1] & Henricum Coupere, Stephanum Cartere, Thomam Hille, Thomam Cony, Iohannem Hedyndone, Iohannem Hosteler, Iohannem nuper seruientem Iohannis Hikkes, Iohannem Kent, Iohannem Clerke, Iohannem Cornysshe & Ricardum nuper seruientes Willelmi Dageville, Willelmum Cartere, Iohannem nuper seruientem Iohannis White, Aliciam, Iulianam & Agnetem de comitatu in comitatum[2] quousque secundum legem & cons*uetudines* regni Anglie predicti Iohannes Wottone, Willelmus Neville, Michael Neel, Henricus Coupere, Stephanus Cartere, Thomas Hille, Thomas Cony, Iohannes Hedyndone, Iohannes Hosteler, Iohannes nuper seruiens Iohannis Hikkes, Iohannes Kent, Iohannes Clerk, Iohannes Cornysshe & Ricardus nuper seruientes Willelmi Dageville, Willelmus Cartere & Iohannes nuper seruiens Iohannis White utlagentur & predicte Alicia, Iuliana & Agnes waynientur, si non comparuerunt. Et si comparuerint, tunc eas capiat et in prisona domini regis saluo custodiri faciat; ita quod habeat corpora eorum coram dictis nunc iusticiariis apud Oxoniam die Lune proximo ante festum sancti Hillarii proximo futurum ad respondendum domino regi de transgressionibus & excessibus antedictis &c.

Et ulterius predictus vicecomes retornauit isto eodem die Martis quod ubi preceptum fuit sibi, sicut pluries, capere Iohannem atte Shoppe &c., si &c., et ipsum &c., ita quod eum isto die haberet coram

Willelmum Smyth & Thomam Fyffyde; qui omnes comparuerunt. Et dictus Iohannes Wadyn dicit quod conuenit cum dictis seruientibus suis eis dare sicut ei liceret per statuta regis & non aliter, nec aliter eis dedit, & de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et dicti seruientes dicunt quod conuenerunt cum dicto Iohanne Wadyn magistro suo modo predicto, nec alio modo de eo ceperunt. Et de hoc ponunt se super patriam &c. Ideo &c. Et ulterius eodem die consideratum fuit per dictos iusticiarios & allocatum quod Willelmus Smyth predictus caperet pro anno preterito de Iohanne Wadyn xx s.; et dictus Thomas Fyffyde xiii s. iiii d.

Et quo ad capiendum Ricardum Prestone masone & Iohannem Gersyndone, Radulfum & Henricum seruientes Iohannis White, Walterum Swon nuper seruientem magistri sancti Iohannis extra portam orientalem Oxonie, Alanum Taskere nuper seruientem Reginaldi Tannere, Thomam Caumbrigge & Iohannam nuper seruientes Iohannis Skynnere, Radulfum Sclattere, Robertum nuper seruientem Iohannis Stratford cook, Iohannem Poly nuper seruientem Petri Welyngtone vicecomes nullum retornauit preceptum. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod ipsos capiat, ita quod eos habeat &c. apud Oxoniam coram predictis nunc iusticiariis ad proximas sessiones &c.

Et predicta Alicia nuper seruiens Iohannis Cade dicit quod capit per annum vi s. & unam tunicam & fuit cum dicto Iohanne per dimidium annum & cepit pro quantitate anni &c. & ponit se super patriam quod non capit plus, nec conuencionem fecit nisi ad voluntatem &c.

Et quo ad execucionem faciendam versus Edwardum Crook & Galfridum seruientem eiusdem Edwardi, Willelmum Herne & seruientes suos qui sibi seruierunt in primis sessionibus iusticiariorum predictorum, Iohannem & Willelmum nuper seruientes Nicholai Nortone, Iohannem Drake nuper seruientem Michaelis Salesbury, Iohannem Hopkyn nuper seruientem Ricardi Iremongere, Willelmum Dageville & seruientes ipsius Willelmi qui sibi seruierunt in primis sessionibus &c. viz. ad eos venire fecisse vicecomes nullum retornauit preceptum; qui non venerunt. Ideo preceptum est dicto vicecomiti quod execucionem versus [eos][1] faciat &c. contra proximas sessiones &c.

Et eciam ante hunc diem in aliis sessionibus, certis de causis, Iohannes seruiens Nicholai Nortone, Iohannes Gardyner & Isabella uxor eius seruientes magistri hospitalis sancti Iohannis extra portam orientalem, ac dictus magister, Iohannes Sulby coupere, Iohanna relicta Iohannis Curreour & Iohannes seruiens eiusdem Iohanne, Iohannes Tannere, Willelmus Iremongere & Alexander & Willelmus seruientes eiusdem Willelmi Iremongere ac Willelmus Wygan ferour & Philippus Cornysshe seruiens eiusdem Willelmi Wygan, & Agnes Hawuylle & Iohannes seruiens eiusdem Agnetis habent diem per iusticiarios essendi hic ad istas sessiones. Adhuc habent diem usque proximas sessiones, & ibidem inferius cause predicte plenius annotantur &c.[2]

Et quo ad capcionem corporis Roberti nuper seruientis Iohannis Stratford cook, prout vicecomes contra istum diem Sabati habuit in mandatis, vicecomes modo retornauit quod dictus Robertus non fuit inuentus &c.; qui quidem Robertus hoc eodem die comparuit, & dictus Iohannes Stratford similiter. Et dictus Iohannes Stratford dicit quod non dedit dicto Roberto nisi secundum statutum &c.; et dictus Robertus dicit quod non cepit nisi secundum statutum, & de hoc ponunt se tam magister quam seruiens super patriam. Ideo preceptum est &c. Et patet veredictum inferius prope &c.

Et ulterius per dictos iusticiarios dicti xii iurati, ut predicitur, isto eodem die Sabati onerati fuerunt de & super materiis per partes predictas isto die superius allegat*is* & in iuratam illam positas, qui quidem xii dicunt quod omnes persone predicte veraciter allegauerunt & dixerunt in omnibus materiis illis &c. Ideo consideratum est quod eant quiete &c. Memb. 16 *d

Et ubi ante hoc tempus seruientes Reginaldi Tannere coram iusticiariis posuerunt loco suo Ricardum Bristowe attornatum suum ad faciendum pro eis fines cum domino rege pro excessibus &c., qui quidem Ricardus habuit diem usque hunc diem presentem &c., qui quidem seruientes modo per dictum Ricardum fines suos faciunt ut inferius, & sic eorum nomina aperte hic patent cum eorum finibus &c.

FRAGMENT OF A ROLL OF 1355

The following fragment of a roll for the court held under the Statute of Labourers is preserved in the University Archives among the rolls of the Assise of Bread and Ale. It is in very bad condition and one side is illegible. It shows that the penalties were rather heavier in 1355 than under Richard II. Twyne saw this document among the Town Archives and gives its heading in Twyne MS. iv. 140.

THE ASSISE OF BREAD AND ALE

The next part of this volume consists of the records of courts that were held in Oxford between the years 1309 and 1351. The courts were in connexion with the assise of bread, the assise of ale, and the assay of weights and measures. After the riot of St. Scolastica's day the Chancellor had supreme control of all these courts, but these records, being of an earlier period, are not properly described as University archives. In common with the rest of the contents of Pyx Y, they seem to have been the property of Twyne, and he gives extracts from them in Twyne MSS., vol. iv, p. 139; and as that which precedes and that which follows in that volume is taken from the Town archives, it is probable that these rolls were there at that time. They may have been given to Twyne when the Gild Hall was cleared to make room for the officials of King Charles I.

The rolls are kept in one bundle and are mixed, but for convenience we have given the rolls of the assise of bread apart from the rolls of the assise of ale. Although the two franchises were never separate, and he who had the assise of ale had also the assise of bread, yet there were separate rolls for the two assises. The court for the trying of bread was held twelve or more times a year, while the court for the assise of ale was held but twice. In a few cases it will be found that the fixing of the price of ale is entered on the roll of the assise of bread, but in all cases the roll of amercements for breach of the assise of ale is distinct, so that it has been possible to separate the rolls as they deal either with bread or with ale.

In the Middle Ages there were various methods to protect the interests of the purchaser; for at that time competition by itself was ineffective to secure cheapness and honest work in things that were manufactured. As a general rule each trade gild had the supervision of the work of its members and appointed officers to search the shops and test the work that was offered for sale, while the price to be charged was fixed by the gild as a whole. This was the method of the cordwainers, glovers, skinners, and other such corporations in Oxford. In the reign of Richard II another method came into use, and the court which was held under the Statute of Labourers had power to punish manufacturers who charged an excessive price for their goods. In the case of meat and fish, officers were appointed by the town every year to examine the quality of what was offered in the market, with power to forfeit that which was unfit, but they had no power to settle the price. In the case of bread and ale, articles of general consumption, the price was fixed, the quality was tested, and penalties were inflicted by the community as a whole in courts that were held from time to time for this special purpose, and the proceeds belonged to him who had the Court Leete or View of Frankpledge.

The method by which the price of bread and ale was to be fixed was laid down in a Statute called 'Assisa panis et cervisie' which is printed in Statutes of the Realm, vol. i, pp. 199, 200. The word assisa, which is used in many ways, means originally something fixed, and here it means the fixed price of bread and ale. The Statute is often attributed to the year 1267, but is really of uncertain date; and in any case it is certain that the assise was much older. Professor Cunningham has shown that it was in existence before 1200 (Growth of English Industry, i. 501); and the Statute which is assigned to 1267 was nothing more than recognizing what existed already, and ordaining that the same scale should be used throughout the realm. It was laid down that the price of ale was to vary according to the price of grain; but in the case of bread the price never varied, but the weight of the loaf varied according to the price of wheat. The method will be easily grasped from the following documents, if it is remembered that bread was weighed with troy weight, and that in that scale you may either reckon 20 pennyweights to the ounce and 12 ounces to the pound, or 12 pennyweights to the shillingweight and 20 shillingweights to the pound.

Attached to the rolls of the assise of bread and ale is the following document, written in a hand of about the year 1400. It is practically a reproduction of what is given in the 'Assisa panis et cervisie' printed in the Statutes of the Realm.

Pistor cum inveniatur panis suus de quadrante in defectu ponderis ii s. vel infra amercietur, & si numerum illum excedat subeat iudicium pillorie & non remittetur iudicium delinquenti neque pro auro neque pro argento.

It is worth while to give four more documents of the same kind which have never been printed, to throw light on the various kinds of bread that are mentioned in the following rolls. The first is taken from Twyne MS. iv. 134, being copied by Twyne from the Red Book of Oxford, which has long been lost. This Red Book seems to have been put together during the years 1330 to 1380, and, as this entry in the Red Book was borrowed from London, its date may be somewhat early in the fourteenth century. It is valuable as settling what was the nature of the bread called clermatyn.

Ex rubro libro ciuitatis Oxonie fol. 70; desumpt' ex parvo nigro libro[2] Lundon' circa finem, in Gilda Aula.

[1] An error for bladis. The same error occurs in Munim. Acad. i. 180, taken from Registers B and C. Probably our document was copied from one of those registers or from a common source.

[2] This volume is referred to in Muni-

Incipit assisa panis et ceruisie.

Quando quarterium frumenti venditur pro xii d., tunc panis de quadrante de wastello ponderabit vi lib. xvi s.; panis autem de coketo de eodem blado et eodem bultello ponderabit plus quam wastellus ii s., et de blado minoris precii ponderabit plus quam wastellus v s.; panis autem de simello [sic] ponderabit minus quam wastellus ii s. quia coctus; panis uero integer de frumento ponderabit unum cokettum et dimidium; panis uero de trayt[1] ponderabit duos wastellos; panis uero de omnibus bladis ponderabit duos cokettos. Et sciendum est quod panis ryngatus, hoc est cribratus, idem quod clermatyn, ponderabit unum wastellum et dimidium; panis uero integer de frumento ponderabit unum cokettum et dimidium maioris ponderis ut supra; panis uero de omnibus bladis ponderabit duos cokettos maioris ponderis.[2]

Quando quarterium frumenti venditur pro 18 d. tunc wastellum de quadrante ponderabit iiii li. x s. viii d.

[Then follows the same list of prices as above.]

Nota quod quando quarterium frumenti venditur pro 12 d., tunc wastellus de quadrante ponderabit equaliter vi lib. xvi sol., et tunc valebit bussellum frumenti i d. ob., qui faciunt VI quadrantes, et ergo habebimus de bussello VI wastellos ponderantes in uniuerso xl lib. xvi sol.; sic igitur operandum est; detur certum precium busselli quodcunque volueris; postea videatur quod quarta possunt abstrahi a predicto bussello et in tot dividatur hec summa xl lib. xvi sol.; et pondus wastelli patebit. Verbi gracia valeat bussellum iiii d. Quot quarta possunt sumi a iiii d.? Constat quod XVI quarta. Tunc ergo dividatur hec summa xl lib. xvi sol. per XVI, et tunc XVI^ma^ pars erit pondus wastelli, viz. li solidos.

Nota cuiuscunque pretii bussellum frumenti fuerit, siue maioris siue minoris, semper omnes wastelli de uno bussello, siue sint plures siue pauciores, ponderabunt equaliter xl lib. xvi sol.

Note marginales ibidem:—

Panis levis qui dicitur pouf[3] mercatorum debet esse de eodem bultello et pondere quo wastellus est.

Panis dominicus,[4] qui dicitur demeyne, debet ponderare quantum wastellus de quadrante excepto pondere ix d. per suam coctionem.

menta Gildhalle (Rolls Series), i. 353*n.*, where it is stated that it is no longer in existence.

[1] In Liber Albus Gildhalle London, iii, p. 411 (Rolls Series), trait is called panis bissus.

[2] This paragraph mentions seven kinds of bread of which the most expensive was simnel; then wastell, coket, clermatyn, whole-meal, trait, bread of mixed grain. In Liber Albus Gildhalle London, iii, p. 423 (Rolls Series), one kind of bread is called 'bunne'. Was this wastel (= gasteau)? Turte bread seems to be distinct from trait (ib. iii. 413) and to be the same as whole-meal bread.

[3] Twyne writes 'pous', but it is 'pouf' in the Liber Albus of London, fol. 215 A (Munimenta Gildhallae, i. 353, Rolls Series), where these two paragraphs occur. It was also called French bread.

[4] In Munimenta Gildhallae London, ii, p. 783 (Rolls Series) it is shown that panis dominicus is sometimes identical Si quarterium frumenti crescit de uno denario, tunc panis de obolo decrescit in pondere de xii d.

Si quarterium frumenti vilescit de uno denario, tunc panis de obolo crescit in pondere de xii d.

Et nota quod quilibet panis debet temptari, dum fuerit calidus, per assaiam factam Lundonie.

Lucrum pistoris.

Sciendum est quod pistor potest lucrari in quolibet quarterio frumenti prout probatum est per pistorem domini regis iiii d. et furfur suum et II panes ad furnagium, et tribus servientibus iii ob.; in carbonibus ob.; in gest[1] ob.; in sale ob.; in busca ii d.; in bultello locato ob.[2]

Assisa ceruisie.

Quando quarterium frumenti venditur pro iii solidis aut xl denariis et hordeum pro xx denariis aut ii solidis, et quarterium avene pro xvi denariis, tunc debent et bene possunt braceatores in civitate vendere II lagenas ad i d., et extra III lagenas ad i d.; et quando in burgo III lagene venduntur ad i d., tunc extra burgum possunt et debent vendere IIII lagenas ad i d.; et sciendum quod non mutatur assisa ceruisie nisi pro xii d. crescentibus uel decrescentibus in venditione quarterii bladi, nec mutatur assisa panis nisi pro vi denariis crescentibus vel decrescentibus in venditione quarterii frumenti.

Iudicium Pillorie.

Si pistor aut braceatrix convicti fuerint quod dictas assisas panis et cervisie non observaverint, primo, secundo, tercio amercientur secundum quantitatem delicti, hoc est quotiescumque pistor defecerit in pondere panis de quadrante citra ii s. vi d., amercietur ut dictum est; et si excedat ii s. vi d. debet subire iudicium pillorie sine aliqua redempcione pecunie. Et si pluries deliquerint et castigari noluerint, paciantur iudicium corporis, scilicet pistor collistrigium et braceatrix tribuchetum vel castigatorium.

Incipit Marescalcia domini regis de penis ordinatis. Ibidem fol. 72.

Assisa panis secundum quod continetur in marescalcia domini regis eis liberata teneatur secundum venditionem frumenti scilicet melioris, secundi et tertii; tam wastellum quam alii panes ponderentur cuiuscumque generis sicut supradictum est per mediam venditionem frumenti; et tunc non mutatur assisa siue pondus nisi per sex denarios crescentes uel decrescentes in venditione quarterii frumenti; et pistor, cum panis suus de quadrante inveniatur in defectu ponderis ii sol. vi d. et infra numerum illum amercietur; et si numerum illum excedat, subeat iudicium pillorie, et non remittatur iudicium delinquenti neque pro auro neque pro argento; with simnel. But in The Little Red Book of Bristol, ii, p. 237, the two are distinct, and here it seems to be less valuable than simnel.

[1] yeast.

[2] A different version of this paragraph may be found in Munimenta Gildhallae London, ii, p. 107 (Rolls Series).

et quilibet pistor habeat signum suum proprium super quodlibet genus panum suorum; et si pistor convictus fuerit in ponderacione panis sui et predictas assisas non observaverit primo, secundo et tercio amercietur secundum quantitatem delicti, si non grave fuerit delictum; et si graviter deliquerit pluries et castigari noluerit, patiatur iudicium corporis sui scilicet pilloriam; et sciendum est quod pistor non debet subire iudicium pillorie nisi excedat numerum ii solidorum et vi denariorum in defectu panis de quadrante. Pilloria siue collistrigium et tumberellum continue habeantur debite fortitudinis ita quod delinquentes exequi possunt iudicium sine corporali periculo.

Assisa vini secundum assisam domini regis observetur, scilicet sextarium ad xii d., et si tabernarius assisam illam excesserit hospitium eius per maiorem et ballivos claudatur et non permittatur ei vinum vendere donec a domino rege licenciam obtineat.

Assisa cervisie secundum venditionem bladi de quo fit braseum statuatur, proclametur et observetur; et braceatrix non accrescat quadrantem in lagena nisi pro xii d. crescentibus in quarterio brasei, nec decrescat quadrantem in lagena nisi pro xii d. decrescentibus, et qui assisam cervisie fregerit primo, secundo, tercio amerciantur et quarto sine redemptione subeant iudicium tumberelli.

The next document is taken from Registrum A of the University Statutes, fol. 98^{v}, the handwriting being of about 1350. It is of interest because it is in English and for other reasons.

[1] The record is much obliterated by the use of gall, but there is a transcript in Twyne MSS., xiv. 112, which was made before the writing was injured. The first letter looks like O, and is so read by Twyne. Possibly it is D, representing the word The.

[2] The assise precedes in the original.

[3] Sour bread or sour loaf is supposed to mean 'leavened'; see N. E. D., sour.

[4] In the previous document 'pouf' bread, which is supposed to be the same as French bread, is to be of the same weight as wastell; here it is to be of the same weight as simnel, and in the Little Red Book of Bristol, ii. 237, it is lighter than simnel.

[5] Temse is a sieve; this is panis cribratus of the previous record.

[6] 'forth right' means entire wheat; panis de integro frumento. Twyne gives ryght, but as far as the original can be read it seems to be spelt as above.

[7] This paragraph is illegible in the original, and is taken from Twyne.

[8] Must mean 'gains'.

The next comes from the same Registrum A, fol. 82v, and from what precedes and follows it must be of about 1388; it is of value because it gives the names toutsayn and dyngleroucy.

Pondera panis. Memorandum quod panis Clermatyn debet ponderare wastellum et dimidium; item Toutsayn excedet panem Clermatyn quadrant*atum* per iii s.; item Dyngleroucy ponderabit duos coketos; item panis equinus excedet Dyngleroucy in quadrante per ii s. vi d.

The same record, word for word, is found in a formulary preserved at the Bishop's Registry at Peterborough, fol. 129; the volume was drawn up about 1400 by John Snappe who was Vice-Chancellor at Oxford in 1397, and was probably copied by him from the Register at Oxford.

The fourth and last record is mainly of importance for the pictures that it gives. It is Douce Charter 62 (in the Bodleian) of about the year 1450, giving a table to show the variation of the weight of the loaf according to the variation of the price of corn. It is in five columns, each having a picture at the top: the first column has a picture of 'The saks with mele'; the second has 'The Wastel', a circular flat cake with a pattern round the edge; the third has 'The ferthyng wyght loff'; the fourth has 'The halpeny wete loff'; the fifth 'The pese loff'. The loaves are represented with straight sides, as if baked in a tin, but whether the tin was round or square is not clear from the picture. At the foot of the table is written:—'Thys ys ye syse of al maner of brede; what greyne of corn so evyr yt be, yt schal be weyd aftyr ye ferthyng wastel; for ye semnel weyzeth lasse and ye wastel be iis by cause of ye ferthyng[3]; and ye ferthyng wyght lofe schal wey more than ye wastel be iis be cause of ye brayng[4]; and ye halpeny wete lofe schal wey III ferthyng wythe loffis; and ye lofe of almaner corne schal wey II ob. wyth lofys; and the baker schal be alowyed in ye crafte for fornage iiid, for wode iiid, for II pagys i d. ob., for salt ob.,

[1] Perhaps Twyne misread the original. It may have been 'to the oven hire'. In the Latin it is ad furnagium.

[2] i. e. barme (= yeast).

[3] 'seithyng' must be meant; see below.

[4] To bray is to pound; but this makes no satisfactory sense.

In the following rolls we have ten names of different kinds of bread; wastell, coket, clermatyn, panis integer de frumento, panis de omni blado, simnel, tusseyn (toyseyn, touseyn), treyt, paindemain, panis albus; but of these paindemain (which is only mentioned once) is generally identified with simnel, tusseyn (as will be shown) is the same as panis integer, and we may assume that panis albus is another name for coket; the list, therefore, is reduced to seven kinds of bread. We will take them in their order according to their value.

The most valuable bread[3] was simnel. According to the assise list simnel, wastell, and coket were made of the same white flour, but a farthing simnel was to be two shillings lighter than a farthing wastell and four shillings lighter than a farthing coket. We are told that the simnel might fairly be lighter than the wastell 'quia coctus', that is, because it was boiled as well as baked. This is how cracknel biscuits are made, and the picture of a simnel in 'The Boke named The Assyse of Bread'[4] is not unlike a large cracknel.

Next in value comes wastell. In one place in our rolls the name is spelt Gastel, and the word is no doubt the same as gâteau. As wastell and simnel are treated as though they would normally be of the same weight, and simnel is known to have been some kind of cake, we may assume (even apart from the name) that wastell was not plain break, like coket, but a cake. Probably the English for wastell was cake-bread; and the description of cake-bread in the N. E. D., 'bread made in flattened cakes', answers to the picture of a wastell which is to be found in 'The Boke named The Assyse of Bread' and in the Douce MS. that is mentioned above.

The third is coket, of which there were two kinds, according as it was made of the best or second-best flour. A farthing coket of the former kind weighed two shillings more than a farthing wastell, of the

[1] In the Latin version 'in boletello locando obolum': the word must mean boulting cloth, but it is not in N. E. D.

[2] The Statute of Winchester of 1285, as printed in Statutes of the Realm, i. 96–8, contains nothing about bread and ale; the Statutum de Pistoribus, printed there, i. 202, 203, has sometimes been attributed to 1285 (ib. 202 n.), but reference seems to be to the Assise of Bread, printed i. 199, 200, which is usually assigned to 1267.

[3] According to the list given in The Little Red Book of Bristol, vol. ii, p. 237, more valuable than simnel was panis Francicus; but that list is of little value; it is inaccurate in many points.

[4] Printed in black letter about 1525, and reproduced in facsimile by E. W. Ashbee; it translates the Latin assise 'symnell shall wey lesse than the wastel by two shillings bycause of the sethynge'.

latter kind five shillings more. The name coket had disappeared by the beginning of the sixteenth century, and in the list of bread in 'Arnold's Chronicle' and in 'The Boke named The Assyse of Bread' it is called White Bread. It is likely enough that this name was in use in the Middle Ages as well, for in our rolls the scribe occasionally speaks of panis albus, and Blancpain was a family name in Oxford at the beginning of the thirteenth century.

The fourth bread is clermatyn, which was to weigh half as much again as wastell. It is not mentioned in the first and fifth of the lists printed above, which we assign to about 1400 and 1450, but it is mentioned in the other three lists, which are earlier; and they explain what its nature was. It is described as panis ryngatus, hoc est cribratus, or temse bread, so that it may be identified with cribble bread.[1] It seems that after the grain had been ground the baker sifted it to obtain white flour; first he sifted out the bran, then the next coarsest which was sometimes called treat, treit, or treyt, now often known as pollard; and thirdly he sifted out what is now called sharps or toppins and was at one time called cribble. From the finest flour was made coket, from cribble was made clematyn, and from treyt was made panis de treyt. There is no mention of this bread in the sixteenth or following centuries.[2]

The fifth bread is panis integer de frumento, which was to weigh half as much again as coket. There were, as we have said, two kinds of coket, and, according to the Assise, it was the heavier coket that should supply the standard, but in 'The Boke named The Assyse' the lighter coket is taken. In that book, and in John Powell's Assize of Bread which was often reprinted between 1650 and 1714, the English for panis integer is wheaten bread, i. e. bread made of the whole grain.

Sixth is treyt, trait, or trete, which weighed twice as much as wastell. It is often assumed that treyt is the same as turte bread, but this seems to be a mistake. In the White Book of London (Rolls Series), vol. iii, p. 411, it will be seen that tourte is identical with whole-meal bread, and that treyt is a cheaper kind. The best account of the word is in the N. E. D., s.v. Treat. It is mentioned as early as the statute which is generally assigned to the year 1267, but in our rolls it is only mentioned three times, and it is omitted in 'The Boke named the Assyse of Bread'.

[1] Bread called 'cribel' is mentioned at Leicester in 1352 (Records of the Borough of Leicester, vol. ii, p. 89). In the Vellum Book of Leicester (E. H. R. xiv, p. 504) panis cribelatus weighed half as much again as wastell.

[2] A writer of 1552 speaks of bread called 'chete bread, raunged bread or cribel bread'; see N. E. D., s.v. chete. Ranged or ringed means sifted. At Leicester 'rynge bread' was treit not clermatin (E. H. R. xiv, p. 504). As both breads were made from what had been sifted out, the name ringatus could be used of either.

Last comes panis de omnibus bladis, bread made of mixed grain; it weighed twice as much as the coket. In 'The Boke named the Assyse of Bread' and other printed tables of the assise of bread, it is called Household Bread.

In addition there is one mention of paindemain; but all the authorities are agreed that this is another name for simnel. There is more difficulty over the bread which is called tusseyn, toyseyn, or touseyn, and occurs sixteen times. The word cannot be found in the dictionaries, and all that can be said is that it is not identical with clermatyn, treit, or bread of mixed grain, for they are mentioned by the side of tusseyn, but that in no case where tusseyn occurs is there any mention of panis integer or whole-meal bread.

In the fourth of the lists printed above there is mention of Toutsayn bread, which was to weigh three shillings more than clermatyn. Now this will be correct if Toutsayn is the same as panis integer. For this bread was to weigh a coket and a half, whereas clermatyn was a wastell and a half. Now as there was a difference of two shillings between a coket and a wastell, there would be a difference of three shillings between Toutsayn and clermatyn.

Dyngleroucy, which occurs in the same list as Toutsayn, was evidently the same as Household Bread, or Pese Loaf, or Bread of Mixed Grain.

The relative popularity of these kinds of bread and the size of loaf which was in most request can be deduced from the facts which are given in the rolls of the assise. In 163 cases there was a defect of weight in wastell; in 161 cases it was the farthing wastell, and in only two cases the halfpenny wastell. In 199 cases the coket was too light, and, if the one case of panis albus is added, the total is 200; all of these refer to the halfpenny coket loaf, with the exception of six which are the farthing coket. Clermatyn is mentioned 78 times, of which 72 are the halfpenny clermatyn; in the case of the other six the size of the loaf is not given. Of panis integer we have 41 cases, and if we add the 16 cases of tusseyn the total is 57; of these 42 were halfpenny loaves, 12 were penny loaves, and three are not fully described. Treyt is mentioned only three times, and in each case a halfpenny loaf. Bread of mixed grain or household bread occurs 33 times, in two cases a farthing loaf, in 18 cases a halfpenny loaf, in six cases a penny loaf, and in seven cases the description is incomplete. Simnel, the dearest bread, occurs only 14 times, 13 of them being the farthing simnel and one the halfpenny.

About the custody of the assise of bread and ale there was a long dispute between the Town and the University; beginning in 1248 it did not end until 1355. The interests of the Town and the University were not the same; for those who transgressed in the matter of bread or ale were Townsmen, and their fellow burgesses were unwilling to enforce the penalties that were due. In 1248, 'for the tranquillity and benefit of the University', the King granted (among other privileges) that, whenever the burgesses had a trial of bread and ale, notice was to be given to the Chancellor and Proctors of the University on the previous day, that they might be present, if they wished, either in person or by deputy.[1] In 1255 this grant was repeated, and it was laid down that bread and ale should be tried twice in the year.[2] In 1285 Edward I issued a writ, stating that by the grant of Henry III all bread and ale that was found to be contrary to the assise was to be forfeited to the King, and that, as the Mayor and Bailiffs did not exact this penalty duly, it was to be collected in future by the Constable of the Castle, who would answer for it at the Exchequer.[3] This writ is surprising, partly because it makes no mention of amercements such as we find on the rolls of the assise, but only of forfeited bread and ale, and partly because we should have assumed that what was forfeited as well as the amercements belonged not to the King but to the burgesses in right of their fee-farm of the City. But the writ, if it was ever carried into effect, was short-lived and was repealed on March 18, 1301, when the Sheriff was commanded to cause the assise of bread and ale to be kept in the presence of the Proctors of the University or their deputies as often as is necessary, as the Constable of the Castle no longer attends to the assise.[4] Three years earlier than this we have a complaint of the University that they had been granted the privilege of making trial of the ale once a year, but the burgesses would not allow it.[5] There is no evidence that the University had received such a privilege, and it must be remembered that in the Middle Ages many wild claims were made without foundation. In 1305, and again in 1311, the University complained that the assise was not properly observed, the penalties not being duly exacted;[1] and it is mentioned in 1311 that when a baker was adjudged to stand in the pillory, he was allowed to do no more than go up on the scaffold and then come down again, whereas he should have been fixed in the pillory for an hour.[2] In 1315 the University complained that the punishment of the tumbrel was not enforced on brewers, as the statute required.[3] On March 4, 1318, the King committed to Richard Damory the forfeiture of bread and ale in Oxford at a rent of £5 a year; but no doubt the court was held as heretofore by representatives of the Town and University. In 1320 the University complained that the penalties due to bakers and brewers were remitted in favorem delinquentium, and petitioned that the Chancellor might have a duplicate of the roll of offences.[4] This seems to have been carried out, and two of our rolls of the assise of ale are indentures, showing that they were drawn up in duplicate. The University also complained of the juries that were selected to give decisions about the price of wheat and other matters connected with the assise, and asked that the Chancellor and the Mayor should together choose the juries.[5] On March 20, 1324, the King made an important grant by which the custody of the assise, together with its profits, was granted to the Chancellor and the Mayor jointly, this grant to hold good during the King's pleasure;[6] and on the death of Edward II it was renewed by his son in 1327[7] and again on March 18, 1336.[8] On April 12, 1336, the King renewed his grant, making it perpetual.[9] A deed of 1339 shows that there was friction between the Mayor and the Chancellor, the one refusing to be present at the time and place fixed by the other;[10] and in 1355, after the riot of St. Scholastica, the custody of the assise was granted to the Chancellor alone. In 1461 the annual payment of £5 for the assise was reduced to one penny.[11] It may be added that the profits of the assise of bread and ale were a perquisite of the Chancellor, or of the Chancellor and Proctors; there is no mention of them in the accounts of the University.

It was natural enough that when the burgesses of Oxford were deprived of the profits of the assise of bread and ale, they desired a remission of part of their fee-farm. In 1324 they petitioned the King for a reduction of £5, and the King ordered the Treasurer and the Barons of the Exchequer to make search concerning the justice of the claim; it seems, however, that owing to the disturbances of the time nothing was done, and when Edward III ascended the throne the burgesses renewed their demand.[1] Thereupon the King ordered the Treasurer and the Barons of the Exchequer to examine into the matter. Nothing more is reported until in 1352 the burgesses once more urged their claim,[2] and after an inquiry it was found that their fee-farm rent ought to be reduced £5. As many of our rolls do not specify the amercements that were levied, we do not know how much the assise of bread was worth; but the roll of 11 Ed. III shows that in that year the amercements and the forfeited bread were of the value of £4 10*s.*, and, if the amercements for ale are added, the total must have been nearly £10. No doubt there were some expenses of the court, but the profits must always have been well over £5.

Bread might be defective in two ways, either in quality or in weight, and our rolls show that each offence was punished in a special way. If the bread was of bad quality it was forfeited, and apparently was sold for what it would fetch, but no amercement was levied; this is a conclusion drawn from the entry in our rolls, viz. that on April 28, 1326; there was no defect (in weight), but horsebread was forfeited worth 7*d.* In all cases where a monetary fine is imposed, it is because the bread was defective in weight. On the other hand, if the bread was defective in weight it does not seem to have been forfeited; thus on October 31, 1337, there were four cases in which coket bread was defective, but in the schedule of bread that was forfeited that day there is no coket. Again on April 5, 1315, loaves of the value of ninepence were declared to be defective in weight, but the value of forfeited bread for that day was $2\frac{1}{4}d.$ It may be objected that it can hardly have been the custom that a loaf should be sold in the open market as of full weight, after it had been proved that it was of insufficient weight; but it may have been that the loaf was broken, so that it could not be sold, and then was left in the hands of the baker for his private use.

The roll of 11 Ed. III is particularly valuable because it gives not only the names of the offenders but also the amounts they had to pay. The penalties are called either misericordia or finis; a close inspection will show that in most cases a finis comprises more than one misericordia, but as far as can be seen this does not apply to all the cases; thus on May 19, 1338, William de Brehulle pays a fine, though it is his first offence. The roll of 17 Ed. II gives the amercements in some cases but not in all, and does not distinguish between fines and amercements. When the offence was often repeated, the punishment was the pillory, in which case there was no amercement as well. The punishment of the pillory seems to have been often inflicted on a festival, e. g. St. Paul's day (see court of November 23, 1325), St. Frideswide's day (see court of September 14, 1314). The final and worst punishment was to be compelled to abjure the trade of baking for a year and a day.

[2] It would be a natural assumption that these two were the proctors for the year, but it seems that it was not so. On Oct. 27, 1309, Bricius de Scharstede is named as one of the proctors (Bp. Dalderby's Register, Inst. fol. 154). Of the burgesses mentioned, John de Dokelington was mayor, and William de Bourgh was one of the bailiffs for 1309; Andrew de Pyrie was probably an alderman; he had been mayor in 1297. The profits of the Town of Oxford were part of the dowry of Queen Margaret.

THE ASSISE OF ALE

The rolls of the assise of ale differ in many respects from the rolls of the assise of bread. The courts were held but twice a year, about Easter and Michaelmas, and the offenders were presented ward by ward. This was the way at the view of frankpledge, which also was held only twice a year, the presentments being made by each ward separately; and the same was the rule at the court which was held under the Statute of Labourers, each of the four wards being taken separately.

In the records of the court the sellers of ale are divided into two classes represented by the letters B. and R.; the former is sometimes expanded to Bra or Bre, and must represent Brasiator or Brewer;

the latter is expanded to Regr', and stands for Regrator or Regratarius. A regrator of beer was one who in modern language 'kept a public house'. The word was used of other occupations as well, but that it meant a publican is proved by one of the Parliamentary Petitions (Collectanea, iii, p. 103, O. H. S.). It is not easy to see why it was necessary to state on the roll whether a man was a regrator or a brewer. From notes on our second roll it is evident that a regrator was not always a man who sold another man's ale, but that sometimes he brewed it himself. It is puzzling that in some cases a man is described as a regrator in one ward, but in another ward in the same roll he is described as a brewer.

There can be no doubt that the names on these rolls occur in a geographical order, and in some cases we have sufficient knowledge of the residents of mediaeval Oxford to identify the course which was taken by the man who made the list. For the purpose of reconstructing a directory of Oxford in the fourteenth century these records will be of value. It is true that they do not give us a complete list of the inhabitants of the town; not only are all householders omitted who belonged to the University, but many others as well; but so common was it to brew ale and sell it that our rolls must contain more than half the householders of the town for the years they cover.

What was the exact method of procedure is a little uncertain, but, if we may argue from the court which was held under the Statute of Labourers, we should assume that shortly before the court was held the constable of each ward passed through his ward and noted the names of those who were selling ale or had sold it since the previous court. A copy of this list he would give to the appointed tasters of ale, who soon afterwards would go their rounds to see if the ale was of good quality. Whether they made the circuit of the whole of Oxford in one day is uncertain, but it seems unlikely that even four men would be enough to taste the ale of over 300 brewers in one day. When the court was held, each name was taken in turn; the tasters would say whether the quality of the ale was satisfactory, and apparently public notoriety settled whether the price at which it was sold was that which had been laid down according to the value of grain. It seems that there were not many who had not broken either the standard of price or the standard of quality.

Michaelmas, 1311.

The roll which comes first is dated the fifth year of King Edward, and from the writing it would be uncertain whether it was of Edward II or Edward III. But as it mentions Robert de Wormenhale who died in 1324, Joanna Attemore who died in 1326, and Henry de Hethrop who died in 1329,[1] the date must be 5 Ed. II. The next question to settle is whether it is the Easter or the Michaelmas court, i. e. Michaelmas 1311, or Easter 1312. We know from the rolls of the Assise of Bread that in Nov. 1310 the price of ale was fixed at $1\frac{1}{4}d.$, wheat being at 8*s.* a quarter, and that in Nov. 1311 it was fixed at $\frac{3}{4}d.$, wheat being at 5*s.* 4*d.* a quarter. Between those dates the price must have been at 1*d.* a gallon for a certain time; though we do not know the day on which this price was fixed, we learn from the rolls of the Assise of Bread that wheat was at 6*s.* 4*d.* in June 1311, and at that price for wheat the gallon of ale would be 1*d.* In our roll the proper price is evidently 1*d.*, and we conclude that its date is between June and Nov. 1311. At the Easter court of 5 Ed. II, i. e. Easter 1312, the price of wheat was still as low as 5*s.* 4*d.* a quarter, and the gallon of ale would have remained at $\frac{3}{4}d.$ The date therefore is Michaelmas 1311.

THE ASSAY OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES, 1340–6

The next roll contains a court for the assay of weights and measures, the only record of this kind that survives in Oxford. It is undated, but the statement that John de Selewode was an alderman at that time shows that the date must be between Michaelmas 1340 and Michaelmas 1346; until the former date Selewode was bailiff and therefore could not have been an alderman; at the latter date he became mayor, and held the office until his death. He was an alderman for the year beginning Michaelmas 1344, but for the other five years in question the aldermen are unknown; and we have no means of fixing the date of our record more closely than Michaelmas 1340–6.

The assay of weights and measures was closely connected with the assise of bread and ale; for purchasers might be cheated not only in the price and quality of the bread and ale, but also by defect in the weights and measures that were used. But though the assay and the assise were closely connected, they could be, and sometimes were, in different hands; and the assay dealt not only with the weights and measures used in the sale of bread and ale, but also with measures of length, such as the ell, and with weights of avoirdupois scale which were used in the sale of wax and candles; in the sale of bread the troy scale was used.

At this time the assay was conducted by the aldermen of Oxford and the Chancellor together. On February 18, 1327, the King issued a writ[1] that the Chancellor and the Mayor should have 'the assise of weights and measures'; but it seems that some difficulty was made, probably by the aldermen; and Twyne (xxii. 273) quotes a record[2] which he saw in the Town Archives in which the representatives of the Town in October 1328 state before Parliament at New Sarum that the assay of measures had never been part of the assise of bread and ale, but that they agreed that in future the Chancellor and the Mayor should hold the assay, provided that the profits were taken by the Town. On October 25 the King decreed [1] that the Mayor and the Chancellor should conduct 'the assise of ale and bread', and the Aldermen and the Chancellor 'the assise of weights and measures'. On July 12, 1348, it was agreed between the Town and the University that the Mayor and the Chancellor should conduct both the assise and the assay, but that the University should receive none of the profits of the assay; one-tenth was to be given to St. John's Hospital and the rest to the Town.[2] After the riot of St. Scolastica the Chancellor alone conducted the assay, but the profits were still to be divided as by the agreement of 1348.

The term used was indifferently 'the assise of weights &c.' or 'the assay of weights &c.', but in process of time it was found more convenient to use the word assay when dealing with weights and measures, and assise when dealing with bread and ale.

A POLL TAX

The next document is a roll of payments in the South-east Ward; it is undated, but from the handwriting it must be of the fifteenth century. We should conclude that it is between 1426 and 1452, because Henry Lolly and Edmund Kyppyng appear in the rental of the Hospital of St. John as dwellers in the South-east Ward in 1426, while in the rental of 1452 they are not mentioned. On the other hand, John Asschebury is in the rental of 1452 in All Saints Parish, while in 1426 the house was occupied by Thomas Withyg, who is known to have been his stepfather. Wood has dated the roll as circa 1429, and that is probably not far wrong.

The payments have the appearance of a poll tax of 2*d.* a head, i. e. half a groat; but there was no poll tax, as far as is known, between 1426 and 1452. If it gives payments for breaches of the assise of ale, all that can be said is that it was a strange system to amerce all offenders at the same sum. For the same reason, it can hardly be the payments for breaches of the statutes of labourers.

Whether the names are in a strictly geographical order is at present uncertain.

PROCTORS' ACCOUNTS

The mediaeval Proctors' accounts which survive are no more than fifteen in number, ranging from 1464 to 1496; then there is a blank until the year 1562. At Cambridge the Proctors' accounts, which begin with the year 1455, are almost complete from that date, and are now available for students in Grace Books A and B, edited by Mr. Stanley Leathes and Miss Bateson respectively. There is this difference between what survives at Oxford and Cambridge; at Cambridge the Proctors' books survive, but not the final accounts as audited by the University; at Oxford the audited accounts survive, but not the Proctors' books. One consequence is that in the Cambridge accounts there is more detail but less arrangement than in the Oxford accounts. The reason why the arithmetic of the Oxford accounts is often at fault may be that the addition was done in the Proctors' books, and when the entries and the balance were transcribed on the final accounts some figures were slightly incorrect.

At Cambridge it was the custom to carry forward the balance from year to year, very much in the modern way; but at Oxford if there was money in hand it was deposited in a chest, and might never reappear in the Proctors' accounts. It might be thought at the first glance that Oxford had no balance, but a study of the rolls makes it appear that the average income of the University in these fifteen years was about £58, and the average expenditure less than £45; the difference was placed in various chests, and was, no doubt, used towards the expensive buildings which were being erected in the latter half of the fifteenth century. Not only was the Divinity School a continual drain, but the School of Canon Law was rebuilt, and finally St. Mary's Church. A portion of the expenditure on the Divinity School and the School of Canon Law appears in these rolls, but there were other accounts for both these buildings; and no doubt, if they survived, we should find that the sums transferred by the Proctors to the University chests reappeared in these accounts. The average income at Cambridge at this time seems to have been under £30, and the average expenditure less than £20, although the two Universities were much alike in numbers.

The following is the income of the University of Oxford, grouped under different headings.

Of the various sources from which the income of the University was derived the most profitable was the payments for the degrees of Doctor; the average receipts were £26 a year, nearly half the average income of the University. The fees for this degree were, to our ideas, very high; even Friars had to pay £10, and Benedictine monks paid £20. In 1447 John Gudwyn, Austin friar, paid £10 'vice convivii sui',[1] while in 1451 William Seton, a Benedictine monk, paid £20.[2] In the accounts of 1472 and 1474 we find Friars paying £10. In 1460 the Friars complained that this fee of £10 was higher than the fee demanded at Cambridge; but the University answered that though the fee at Cambridge was only five or six marks, yet in addition there was the expense of providing a feast for the regents.[3] This does not seem to be the truth. In 1455 a Friar paid only £2 at Cambridge, and the words are added pro non convivando[4]; in one case a Friar[5] pays £8 'quia non convivavit'; but in no case is the figure as high as £10. In 1465 Oxford complained that some of the Benedictines had changed their place of study, i.e. deserted Oxford for Cambridge[6]; this may have been because of the high fees. In the year 1478, perhaps as a result of the complaint of the Friars or because Cambridge was 'cutting the rates', Oxford lowered her fees; Friars were to pay in future £6 13*s.* 4*d.* 'loco convivii', monks were to pay £13 6*s.* 8*d.* or more in certain cases.[7] Our Accounts agree with this Statute, and show that Friars paid only ten marks from 1478 onwards.

Each year the University received a considerable sum from graces; in 1469 and 1478 it was as much as £35, and the average for fifteen years was nearly £17. A grace was a permission given by the University to abridge or omit some of the conditions which were attached by statute to the taking of degrees. Some graces were granted without conditions (simpliciter is the word used); others had one or more conditions attached, and frequently a payment of money was one of the conditions. Whether a payment was made for a grace or not depended, no doubt, on the value of the grace; if it was merely the permission to shorten the period of study by a term or two, the grace was given simpliciter, and most graces were of this kind; but there were also many graces to which a payment of a mark or a noble was annexed.[8] At Cambridge it seems that very few graces were granted for money; there are instances,[1] but less than one a year. On the other hand, there was a source of income at Cambridge of which we hear nothing at Oxford, namely the forfeited pledges (cautiones) when a man on taking a degree did not carry out the tasks that were due from him. On this point the statutes of the two Universities must have been radically different. At Oxford a man was bound to carry out the duties of his degree by his oath; and he would be guilty of perjury if he omitted these duties; his only course would be to ask from the Congregation of Regents for a grace to omit the duties in question. But at Cambridge it seems that a man could omit the duties if he was willing to forfeit his caution.

The fees for taking the degrees of Bachelor and Master of Arts were small. No doubt there were payments to beadles and presents to Regent Masters, of which little is known at present, but to the University the only payment was one week's commons for the M.A. degree and half a commons for the degree of Bachelor.[2] At Cambridge the Statute was that a full commons should be paid for each degree, and the Cambridge accounts mention each person by name who paid a commons. The general rule at Cambridge was that a questionist, i.e. candidate for B.A., paid 12*d.*, an inceptor 20*d.*; but at Oxford the commons seems to have been slightly less. Thus in 1550 the half commons, though usually sixpence,[3] was fivepence in one case,[4] and in another case fourpence[5]; the full commons is not specified except that it was to be 'secundum usum loci in quo inhabitat',[6] and few Colleges and Halls had a commons as high as twenty pence. As the average receipts at Oxford from this source were about £3, we may estimate that about thirty would take the degree of M.A. each year, and perhaps forty the degree of Bachelor. This rough estimate is corroborated by a statement in Registrum Aa, fol. 122, that in 1462 a full congregation of regents numbered sixty, and as a man was a regent for two years after taking his degree, it means that about thirty incepted each year. A study of the Cambridge Grace Book A suggests that the degrees at Cambridge were slightly fewer, if the lists are complete in that book. It is obvious from these figures how small were the numbers at both Universities. If no more than forty took the degree of Bachelor each year, the undergraduates can hardly have been more than three hundred, if we allow that more than half of them left Oxford without taking a degree; to these we may add about one hundred bachelors, seventy regents, and about one hundred and fifty non-regents. This, of course, omits manciples, cooks, choir-boys, and servants, who all were reckoned as of the University. In a letter of 1438 the University asserts that its numbers did not reach a thousand.[1]

Little need be said about the receipts from house property. The previous volume (pp. 275–323) shows what properties the University had, and when they were obtained, and these accounts show what they were worth at the end of the fifteenth century. Both Cat Hall and William Hall had ceased to be halls, and were rented at only 4*s*.; William Hall is described in 1490 as 'aula sive tenementum'[2], and as the rent was to be 2*s*. the tenement can have been but small; it was probably a stable, which it certainly was in the seventeenth century; Tingwick Inn and Black Hall were rented at 13*s*. 4*d*. and 16*s*., and as the annual rent of a chamber was 10*s*. we may guess what the size of these halls was. A rent of 2*s*. paid yearly by Balliol College for Sparrow Hall is explained by the deed printed in Balliol Deeds (O. H. S.), p. 30. In addition to the tenements mentioned in vol. i, the accounts show that 6*s*. 8*d*. was paid from the New Inn, or as it is in one place 'the New Inn by the church of St. Mary Magdalen'. This was the inn known later as the Cardinal's Hat[3]; it was a property of Oseney, and the Oseney rentals record the quitrent paid from it annually to the University. The amount which was received from the house property of the University varied according to the amount of repairs that was necessary, and of the rooms that were vacant. The gross rental was rather over £7, the net receipts were on an average under £5, and would have been less if the buildings had been kept in first-rate repair; for our accounts show that Beef Hall and the School of Canon Law required heavy expenses, apart from the annual repairs.

There is no difficulty in tracing the history of the payments from Eynsham and Oseney Abbeys. In 1214 Nicholas, Bishop of Tusculum,[4] decreed that the Town of Oxford should pay to the University 52*s*. a year 'for the use of poor scholars', and also 16*s*. 8*d*. to provide a feast on the day of St. Nicholas to 100 poor 'clerks'. These duties were undertaken by the Abbey of Eynsham,[5] though it is not known for what reason; and in our accounts we find that each year 16 shillings[1] is paid for a feast of 100 undergraduates, and the 52 shillings are distributed among the Regent Masters, who would be correctly described as scolares. This was according to the University Statutes.[2] The payment from Oseney Abbey dates from the time of Robert Grosteste. When he was Bishop of Lincoln, Oseney obtained from him the appropriation of the church of Fulwell, a church which has long disappeared, but stood in what is now part of the parish of Mixbury. In return for this concession, the bishop bargained that Oseney Abbey should pay 26*s.* 8*d.* a year to the University of Oxford. Not long after the dissolution of the monasteries, when Christ Church had inherited the rights and duties of Oseney, the payment was extinguished, as part of the arrangement by which the University acquired the Schools of Arts which had been the property of Oseney . The accounts show that the University obtained yearly a small amount from those who had caused breaches of the peace. In 1469 this reached the exceptional figure of £4 15*s.*; we do not know what the reason may have been, but Warwick and Clarence raised disturbances in many parts of England in the early months of 1470, and they may have been at work at Oxford as elsewhere. The average receipts were about twenty shillings a year, and the accounts show that the figure was rising slightly at the end of the century. The Statute beginning 'Cum effrenata' passed in 1432 laid down a schedule of fines for breaches of the peace according to the enormity of the offence,[3] and decreed that one-third of the proceeds should be received by the University, one-third by the Chancellor, one-eighth by each of the Proctors, and one-twelfth by the beadle.[4] When the Chancellor's Register (Reg. Aaa) is printed, it will be seen that, in addition to the fines, there were small sums received from the sale of confiscated weapons. In the year 1488 our accounts show receipts from the sale of weapons, but probably in other years the receipts from both sources are merged in one total. At Cambridge the Proctors' Accounts show receipts from those who 'had been convicted',[5] and in one place the entry is in full 'convicted of disturbing the peace'[6]; but at Cambridge the fine seems to be always 20*d.* or 40*d.*, and the cases are much fewer than at Oxford, the receipts being only a few shillings in the course of a year.

Another source of the income of the University was a payment made by those who kept grammar schools in Oxford. In the list of the moneys that were received by the Proctors in 1411[1] we find pecunia sex marcarum grammaticis recipi consuetae (read consueta), 'a sum of six marks received from the grammar masters'. In 1447, when there were three grammar masters, Richard Bulkley, John Cobbow, and John Russell, an attempt was made to evade this payment of six marks, but it was enforced.[2] In our accounts a sum sometimes of £4, sometimes less, is paid until the year 1477, but not afterwards; but in some years a portion of the sum was returned to the payers, as though the profits of the grammar schools were dwindling. That such was the case, we should gather from a letter which the University wrote in 1466 to the Bishop of Lincoln[3] that 'grammar, the base of all education, has gone into exile and deserted this realm'. Although no payment was received by the University after 1477, yet the old statute was not revoked, and in 1478 it was decreed that although any free grammar school, should such be founded, was to be exempt from payment to the University, yet the others who teach grammar shall pay 'the sum which of old was recovered from them'.[4] From the University Statutes it is not clear when the payment was begun, why it was exacted, or how much it was to be; but they show that from early times the University legislated about the grammar schools, although the students at the schools were not members of the University[5]; and appointed two regent masters to supervise the teaching in grammar schools.[6] As early as 1322 Nicholas de Tingewick granted two messuages, Beef Hall and Tingwick Inn, to the University to provide a salary of four marks for these two superintendents,[7] and a statute which is assigned by Mr. Anstey to 1344 gives the salary as six marks, of which four marks were to come from the rents of the University, and two marks apparently from the masters who had grammar schools.[8] But these statutes must have been altered in the next century, when, as we have seen, the grammar masters had to pay six marks, while at the same time our rolls show that the salary of the superintendents was reduced to one mark. An undated statute[9] informs us that the sum of £4 received from the grammar masters was to be distributed annually, together with other money, among the Regents in Arts, and such was the custom at the time of our Proctors' Accounts. At Cambridge the supervision of the grammar schools seems to have been the work of the Master of Glomery, the word Glomery being a form of the word Grammary, and no doubt he received a salary from the grammar school masters; and this may be the reason why the accounts of the Cambridge Proctors show no receipts from the grammar masters. At both Universities the grammar schools died out towards the end of the fifteenth century; at Cambridge they omitted sometimes to appoint a Master of Glomery,[1] while at Oxford it was decided in 1492 that as the superintendents of the grammar schools had now no work, but still received a salary, they should be made superintendents of the disputations at the Austin Friars.[2]

In 1464 there was only one grammar master, named Cobbaw, and in 1477 also only one, but in the intervening years there was more than one. Something is known of Cobbaw, alias Cobbow, alias Gobbo. In 1435 Oseney granted to John Cobbow, clerk, a lease of Lyon Hall in St. Mary's parish, on the east side of Grove Street, to be held by him for life at a rent of fifty shillings; and each year the Abbot of Oseney was entitled to send a boy to his school to be instructed in grammar free of charge, unless he was a boarder, in which case the abbot was to pay one shilling a quarter.[3] In the Oseney rental of 1453 Mag. Ioh. Gobowe rents Lyon Hall. Possibly he was in some way connected with Leyland, one of the most famous of schoolmasters; for in a charter at the Bodleian John Leyland and Margaret his wife in 1422 acquire certain lands in Cowley, and about 1460 they are held by John Gobow, of the gift of John Leyland.[4] They were both buried at St. Frideswide's, Leyland dying April 30, 1428, and Cobbow October 15, 1472.[5] In Rous's list of Halls,[6] which is apparently of about 1450, we learn that Leyland's school had been at Peckwater Inn, and that about 1450 there were five grammar schools in Oxford, namely Ing Hall in St. Mary's, Boster Hall and White[7] Hall in St. Peter's in the East, Lyon Hall and Tackley's Inn both in St. Mary's. It is noteworthy that of the three grammar masters of whom there is mention in 1447, Bulkley was of Tackley's Inn, Cobbow of Lyon Hall, and Russell was of Ing Hall. Young Eglesfield attended Leyland's school[1] between 1419 and 1420, and young Edmund Stonor about 1380 was at a boarding school in Oxford,[2] which was kept by a married man.

We are left to guess why the grammar schools at Oxford and Cambridge suffered eclipse at the end of the fifteenth century. It was evidently not owing to any decrease in the number of educated persons, for there is no decrease in the degrees that were taken at the two Universities. Perhaps the solution is provided by the clause of the Oxford statute about free grammar schools; it shows that some free grammar schools had been recently founded, and this may have emptied the old grammar schools.

Among the smaller receipts four deserve some mention. In 1492 and 1496 the accounts record 3*s.* 4*d.* received from the guild of tailors, and in 1494, if the payment was omitted, it must have been by oversight. This payment was made by the tailors in return for a regulation made by the Chancellor and Congregation of Regents in 1491, to restrain tailors who were not of the guild.[3] In the year 1473 and all subsequent years there is a record that 3*s.* 4*d.* was paid annually by the representatives of the town on St. Scholastica's day and that the money was distributed on the same day to poor scholars. After the riot of St. Scholastica's day it was decreed that sixty representatives of the town, the Mayor, and the two bailiffs should attend Mass on St. Scholastica's day and each offer one penny. It would be natural that this offering, like all the other oblations, should be received by the incumbent, which in the case of St. Mary's was Oriel College; and, in accordance with this, we find in the earlier Oriel accounts that the College received 5*s.* 3*d.* on St. Scholastica's day. But the accounts also record that in 1453 the Proctors of the University claimed 3*s.* 4*d.* of the amount, and after long disputes the Vice-Chancellor in February 1462 decided that Oriel ought to receive only 23*d.*, and was to pay to the Proctors the sum of £4 16*s.* 8*d.*, being 3*s.* 4*d.* for the previous twenty-nine years. If the accounts of 1464, 1469, 1471, and 1472 omit this sum of 3*s.* 4*d.*, it must be for the reason that it was paid away on the spot, as soon as it was received, and did not need to be entered on the accounts. In the year 1469 there is a receipt of 6*s.* 8*d.* for issuing letters testimonial.

[1] Hist. of Queen's Coll., i. 321. p. 21.
[2] Stonor Letters (Camden Soc.), i, [3] Ep. Ac., p. 595.

This entry is hard to explain, for the volumes of Epistole Academice show that letters testimonial were issued in many years of which we have the accounts, yet no payment was received for them. Lastly, in some years there is an entry of 2*s.* or 3*s.* 4*d.* forfeited, after an appeal had been made. An early statute about such forfeits is contained in Munimenta Academica[1]; even if it was not in force in the time of these accounts, something like it was in force. The appeals in question were not appeals to the Court of Arches, an appeal which the University never allowed, but appeals from the Chancellor's decision to the congregation of regents, or from the congregation of regents to the congregation of regents and non-regents. There were similar fines at Cambridge for unsuccessful appeals, as may be seen in the accounts in Grace Book A.[2]

Turning to the expenditure, first comes a large sum that was spent each year on the vigils of St. John the Baptist and St. Peter; it ranged from £5 7*s.* 6½*d.* in 1488 to over £7. We are not told how this money was spent until we reach the accounts of 1492, where we are told that it was for a 'recreatio omnium graduatorum'. In 1496 not only were all graduates (i.e. inceptors) entertained, but also bachelors in law; and the cost rose to £8 19*s.* 3½*d.* Perhaps we may assume that this was spread over two days, because it would be difficult to entertain all the graduates at once. In 1492 there is the expense of 4*s.* 6*d.* for lights (luminibus) on the two days, and in other years there is often money for wax torches (cereis), and for rushes, no doubt to strew the floor. In 1494 repairs were needed 'in locis ubi tenebantur dicte recreaciones'. In 1469 the entertainment seems to have been held at Queen's College, and 12*d.* was paid for carrying of benches (scabellorum)[3] to the College. In 1471 the spot was Durham College, whither the clerk of St. Mary's carried the benches at a charge of 12*d.*, and there was a payment of 2*s.* 6*d.* for napkins soiled on the vigil of St. Peter. In 1473 there is the usual payment for carrying the benches, but we are not told whither. Only in one year is this payment omitted, namely in 1478; and in that year we have the unique entry that the Proctors were paid £3 6*s.* 8*d.* because of their dangers in the time of the plague. The two facts, no doubt, are connected; the plague was so severe that the University had been dispersed before June 23. In the accounts of 1464 this expenditure on June 23 and 28 is stated to have occurred in circuitibus Cancelarii; and in a letter of the King in 1444 it is stated[1] that there were two 'circuits' at Oxford on June 23 and 28; but we are not told what the word means.

Another heavy expense was the annual distribution of money to the regents. A man was a regent for two years after taking his degree of Doctor or Master, and during that time had to give twenty-four lectures each term, unless he obtained exemption by means of a grace. Not only was he bound to give these gratuitous lectures, but he was bound by oath to attend all University processions, and to be present in the Congregation of Regents, whenever he was summoned. During these two years his life must have been a burden, and if there was any class that deserved a distribution, it was the regents. From 1478 onwards the sum distributed was always £3 18*s.* 8*d.*, which represents the 52*s.* paid by Eynsham for distribution among scolares, and the sum of £1 6*s.* 8*d.* paid annually by Oseney. Before 1478 the sum was larger, being as high as £7 5*s.* 4*d.* in 1464 and 1469. A statute of the University lays down[2] that the amount to be distributed among the regents was 52*s.* received from Eynsham, two marks received from Oseney, and six marks received from the grammar school masters, or £7 18*s.* 8*d.* in all; but it was the custom by the year 1464 to deduct the one mark that was paid to those who inspected the grammar schools, leaving £7 5*s.* 4*d.* As the payment received from the grammar schools diminished, so the sum to be distributed diminished: and after 1477, when the last payment was made by the grammar schools, the total was no more than £3 18*s.* 8*d.*

Each year there was a feast to the auditors of the account, costing usually £2. The amount is always a round sum, and perhaps the Proctors provided the feast, and were allowed to keep the balance. A similar, but smaller, expense was the refreshment provided for the Chancellor, the Proctors, and the Beadles on the day on which they visited the 'rents' of the University, i.e. the houses which belonged to the University. In 1494 the phrase is 'in visitacione aularum', i.e. visiting the halls owned by the University, to see in what repair they were. The cost was usually two or three shillings.

Next we take three payments which seem to have been used as a means to give the Proctors a salary. Each year sums are paid to the Proctors for their night watch (nocturnis vigiliis), for the hire and repair of armour, and for their small expenses. It is to be noticed that these are always round sums, and cannot be the reimbursement of what was actually spent. It is also to be noticed that each entry ends ut placet iudicibus, 'as the auditors please'; the Proctors did not fix the sum, but left it to the auditors, and it is easy to detect by the writing that the sums for these three entries were added at the end. No doubt the amount allowed by the auditors depended to some extent on the balance; but it is probable that it also depended on the amount that the Proctors had received from other sources. The Statutes make no mention of a salary for the Proctors beyond stating that each Proctor was to receive one-eighth of the fines inflicted for carrying arms and breaking the peace; but in the most turbulent years this would mean no more than £1 for each of the Proctors. Now we have good evidence that the profits of the Proctor were much more than this; for Richard Bradley of Exeter College, who was Proctor in 1474, paid tithes to Lincoln College, as rectors of the church of St. Michael, for the profits of his Proctorship; as he paid 11*s.* 8½*d.*,[1] his profits must have been £5 17*s.* 1*d.* Part of this would be from his fees from those who took their degrees; in most cases seven shillings was paid to the Chancellor and Proctors, and from those who could expend £40 the Proctors each received two marks.[2] But part of it may have been from the payments by the University for the night watch, for the hire of arms, and for small expenses, the University in each case granting a sum that was well above the disbursements. Occasionally we have other sums granted to the Proctors as though to provide them a salary; in 1481 the Southern Proctor is allowed 20*s.* for supervising the builders at Beef Hall, and each Proctor has 10*s.* for his diligence. Next year the Proctors are granted £2 6*s.* 9*d.* for their labours and diligence; and when a servant is wounded or slain, the Proctor receives recompense on a liberal scale.

There were four rents which the University paid every year. From Beef Hall there was a quitrent of 3*s.* which belonged to Eynsham Abbey from the earliest times.[3] For the site of the Divinity School there was a fixed rent of 7*s.* to Balliol College.[4] In the year 1472 and in subsequent years there was a payment of 3*s.* 4*d.* to St. Frideswide's; and if it does not appear in the accounts of 1464, 1469, and 1471 it may be merely an accident. It was due for the part of Patrick Hall which was required for the site of the Divinity School.[1] Lastly there was the payment of one penny a year for the possession of the assise of bread and ale.[2] The money was due to the Exchequer, but it was sometimes paid to the bailiffs of the Town, who conveyed it to the Exchequer when they paid the fee farm. In 1472 this penny is mentioned; in 1479 it is included in the 3*s*. 5*d*. paid to the bailiffs, of which 3*s*. 4*d*. was the customary fee to the bailiffs, when seisin of a freehold was given, and the other penny would be for the assise of bread and ale.

Among the annual salaries paid by the University, the first is that of the Registrar, who was also known as scriba or tabellio Universitatis, with a salary of four marks a year. It is curious that in the University Statutes as printed in Munimenta Academica, there is no mention of this official; but the Statute by which this office was instituted has been found by Mr. Strickland Gibson in a Cambridge MS., and will be printed in his forthcoming edition of the Statutes. It was decreed that the Registrar should be a Master of Arts and a public notary; he was to be appointed by the smaller congregation, the congregation of regents; his salary was to be four marks a year, and he was to receive a fee for each degree that he registered; his work was to draw up leases, acquittances, and letters of the University, and enrol all Acts of the University whether done before the Chancellor or before Congregation and also all University letters. The date of the decree is unknown, and as the earliest letter book of the University begins at the year 1421 it might be thought that the Registrar existed at that date or earlier. But there is some reason for thinking that the first portion of that book is in the handwriting of the various Chancellors, and all that can be definitely stated is that in 1446, when Registrum Aa begins, there was a Registrar in office named Manyngham. At Cambridge we find a Registrar in 1454, when their accounts begin. The Registrar not only kept the University Letter Book and the Acts of Congregation, but once a year his hand appears in the Chancellor's register, when on the morrow of the Nativity of St. Mary a list of halls and principals was drawn up.

The Registrar whose name appears in the first accounts, John Farley, is a man of whom we should like to know more. He entered Winchester College in 1444,[3] and New College in 1448.[4] Being of

New College he did not apply for a grace,[1] and we have no means of tracing his degrees, but he was Registrar as early as October 1458.[2] Our accounts show that he ceased to hold office at Christmas 1464, and the records at New College give the reason; he died in December 1464. In New College Library, MS. 281 is the Almagest of Ptolemy with the inscription 'Liber Collegii beate Marie Winton ex dono magistri Ioannis Farley, quondam socii huius collegii, cuius anime propicietur deus'. The interesting point about Farley is that he has left his name written in Greek characters in several places. It is found in Registrum Aa, fol. 106, and twice in the letter book of the University.[3] The editor of this latter volume says that Farley 'was not a little proud, perhaps, of being able' to write Greek characters; but the writing is so neat and firm that he must have known much more than the Greek characters. He has also written his name in Greek in a Greek Psalter now in the Library of C. C. C. Cambridge,[4] and we may assume that Farley had studied that manuscript. Part of it is said to be transliterated in an Italian hand, which may prove to be Farley's; for Registrum Aa shows that, when he liked, Farley could write a beautiful Italian hand. Farley's name, though not in Greek, occurs in another manuscript in that Library.[5] It is possible that he is the writer of one, or even both, of the Chaundler manuscripts recently printed by the Roxburgh Society. Internal evidence suggests that both are before 1465, and probably by a Wykehamist. They seem to be in two different hands, one using an upright d, the other using a d with a rounded head; but in Registrum Aa Farley uses both forms, and it is evident that an Italian hand was not an ordinary handwriting which did not vary, but what we should call a printing hand, and varied from day to day or week to week according to the taste of the writer. It is noticeable that Farley will often begin a line in the Italian hand, and drift into his ordinary, somewhat untidy, English hand. New College and Thomas Chaundler are known to have been connected with the introduction of Greek to Oxford, and if we could discover more about Farley, it might prove that he had a hand in the same movement; but there is little space in Farley's life for any long visit to Italy to study Greek. He cannot have been M.A. before 1455; he would not have finished his years of regency until 1457; and he was Registrar in 1458. At the time of his death he cannot have been more than thirty-four.

Next we come to the salary of the chaplain of the University; from the Proctors' Accounts he receives only 6*s.* 8*d.* a year, but in addition he obtained £5 from the profits of the assise of bread and ale. In 1401 King Henry IV granted to the University the assise of bread and ale at a rent of one penny a year, which had hitherto been held for a payment of £5; and in 1412 the University decreed[1] that the chaplain of the University, who in future was to be the University Librarian as well, should receive that sum of £5 in addition to the 6*s.* 8*d.* which the chaplain had hitherto received for celebrating the masses of the University. It was not his duty to say mass daily, but only on the dates appointed by the University. In the Calendar printed in Munim. Ac., pp. cxxxix–cl, there are thirteen masses with deacon and subdeacon, and seventeen other masses; and by the time of our accounts two or three may have been added. The accounts from 1481 onwards show that the chaplain received an extra payment of ninepence a year 'by statute'. This may have been in connexion with the mass in commemoration of John and Thomas Kempe which was instituted by statute in 1478.[2]

There are various payments to the parish clerk of St. Mary's, which increased in number year by year and by 1496 amounted to nearly thirty shillings. First comes the regular payment of 4*d.* for ringing the bell on the morrow of the Nativity of St. Mary. On that day all who wished to secure an Academic Hall came to St. Mary's to give cautions for the rent of the Halls that they desired, and as long as the bell was ringing no house that had been an Academic Hall could be refused.[3] Besides this he received 18*d.* a year for ringing the curfew; this does not mean that he rang the curfew every day, but, as stated in the accounts of 1471, at the exequies of Walter de Grey and Reginald the Beadle. For Walter de Gray there were two days (May 1 and November 12) and for Reginald the Beadle one (May 10)[4]; and that the payment was sixpence each time is proved by a document printed in Hearne's Diary.[5] The curfew was rung at the exequies, i. e. not on the evening of the day when mass was said, but on the previous evening, the exequies being the service of the eve. In the later accounts the clerk is paid two shillings for the curfew; probably the commemoration of the Kempes which commenced about 1480 supplied one more day when the curfew was rung. No doubt these payments for ringing are high, but a parish clerk, like many mediaeval officials, was expected to do much work without pay on the condition that he should be overpaid when any payment could be secured. He had no salary from the churchwardens, like a modern parish clerk. From 1469 onwards he was paid for the care of the clock in St. Mary's; it is not mentioned in 1464, and probably it had not been acquired by that time. He was paid 4*s.* a year for this work, and in the last two accounts it seems to be six shillings. He was also paid 4*d.* for carrying the cross whenever there was a procession. In 1481 there were twelve processions, four of them being in Long Vacation at the King's desire. In 1488, besides eight processions, there was a meeting of the King, for which the clerk received a shilling. In 1496 there were nine processions, for which he received three shillings, and two meetings of the 'Prince', each at a fee of two shillings. He was also paid for the custody and cleaning of the house of congregation; and after 1490, about which time the books were moved from the old University Library to the upper room of the School of Divinity, the clerk had also the custody of the 'upper house of congregation'. He was also paid, as has been mentioned, for carrying the forms to the place where the 'recreacions' took place on June 23 and 28; he was also paid for carrying the forms to the place where 'the vesperies of artists' were held; in one year the vesperies took place five times. Lastly he was paid for reading the Epistle at those masses which were celebrated with a deacon and subdeacon; they varied from year to year, sometimes being twelve, sometimes more; he was paid twopence each time.

There was a payment, also, to the clerk of St. Peter's in the East. On the six Sundays in Lent and Easter Day there were special sermons by the University in that church, and in the Chancellor's Register in certain years can be found the names of those who were appointed to preach. For ringing for these sermons the clerk received 4*d.* each time.

Each year there was a payment to the man who filled the post of deacon by reading the Gospel at the masses of the University; he was paid at the same rate as the reader of the Epistle. There was also an extra payment at the masses of Walter de Grey and Reginald the Beadle; for by statute every regent should attend these masses and offer a penny, which was to be supplied from the University funds.[1] It is evident that this statute was not strictly observed; for if all the regents had attended, the oblations would have been more than five shillings at each of the three masses.

In the later accounts there are payments each year to Collegium Regale or the rectors of St. Mary's. The debt was incurred in connexion with the commemorations of the Duke of Gloucester and the Kempes. It seems that there was an unusual use of candles on these days, some of them being the candles of the University and some the candles of the church. For the latter the University had to pay Oriel, which was rector of St. Mary's.

In the accounts year by year there are a few entries which help towards the history of the University. In 1464 there is mention of straw at the New Schools as covering, probably to cover some unfinished walls as a protection against frost. It is difficult to discover what was the state of this New School of Theology. In a letter of 1470 the University laments that it is unfinished,[2] yet in 1466 it ordered some expensive fittings showing that the School was roofed over and in use.[3] Probably the 500 marks paid in 1452 by Cardinal Beaufort's executors was enough to complete the walls and roof, but the two towers at the west end, which were to contain staircases to reach the library, may have been incomplete in 1464 and in 1470.

In 1469 more than £16 was spent on the New Schools, partly in carving the seats which were ordered in 1466 and partly in glazing (clausura) of windows, probably the windows of the upper room which was not yet in use. The Chancellor was met at Thame and consulted. As he was at this time the King's Chancellor, he would move with the King; and probably the Court passed through Thame.

In 1471 there is a reference to the battle of Tewkesbury and the expenses of keeping the peace for the next week. The University had much expense this year in the King's Exchequer, and the sum of £6 13*s.* 4*d.* was drawn from the Chest of Five Keys to meet it; of this £4 was spent on journeys to the King by John Boswell, one of the beadles, and magister Veysey on matters concerning the University; Thomas Woode received 13*s.* 4*d.* for acting as proctor (i.e. barrister) in the Court of the Exchequer; three visits were paid to the King at Beckley, when wine was given to the King's chaplains and there were other expenses amounting to £4 10*s.* in all. It was a troublesome year for the University. It had written a letter to Henry VI on December 22, 1470, expressing delight that he had recovered his throne[1]; and on June 28, 1471, it wrote a similar letter to Edward IV, expressing equal delight at his success. It does not seem that Edward IV bore malice towards Oxford; and he must have perceived that as George Nevyle was Chancellor of the University not much emphasis was to be laid on the letter to Henry VI; the University could hardly do otherwise. But if Edward was placable, it may have been necessary to buy the favour of his officials. One royal messenger was given 3*s.* 4*d.*, another 20*d.*, his secretary a pair of gloves, his minstrels 3*s.* 4*d.* The whole expense was nearly £10. In building there was an outlay of £13 6*s.* 8*d.* on the School of Canon Law, although within twenty years the whole school had to be rebuilt. At the Divinity School there was 29*s.* spent on walls, apparently boundary walls, and as the supervisors were paid £1 for their trouble there was probably more money spent from some other source.

Next year there were heavy expenses about the privileges of the University, and £17 was borrowed for this purpose from the Chest of Five Keys. Of this sum £5 9*s.* 4*d.* was spent 'on the confirmation of privileges by Parliament', and £3 13*s.* 4*d.* for having them enrolled in the King's Exchequer, perhaps on the Remembrancer's roll; William Fowler, who seems to have been a member of Parliament, received gloves for his support of the privileges; Henry Bathe, the Oxford carrier, had 2*s.* 8*d.* for conveying to Oxford the confirmation by Parliament; John Boswell and Doctor Rowce received nearly £4 for their work. The matter will be found in Rotuli Parliamentorum, vi. 33; the grant of 1461 by which the King allowed the University to have the assise of bread and ale at a payment of one penny a year had 'been resumed and voide for lak of certeyn provisions upon certain acts of Resumption'. The University petitioned that the grant might be declared good and effectual by the authority of Parliament. There was an expense of 16*s.* in keeping order about the feast of Epiphany, but the reason is not given; also 3*s.* for cleaning the Divinity School and for the clausura of the upper windows; as clausura seems to mean 'glazing' in the accounts of 1469, it probably has this meaning here.

In 1473 the accounts are normal, but in 1474 there is an entry that wine and gloves were given to the Bastard of Burgundy and other gentlemen. The Bastard of Burgundy must have been in England in connexion with the King's preparations for the invasion of France. It is possible that he came to Oxford on April 5, 1475, which would be within the year of the accounts; for a commission of the peace was issued at Oxford on that date.[1] This would imply that the Lord Chancellor was in Oxford, though not necessarily the King, and we might guess that the Bastard of Burgundy, the Chancellor, and others might have come over from Woodstock. On the Divinity School there was spent £14 13*s.* 4*d.* in repairs, and the supervisor, no doubt a Master of Arts, received 26*s.* 8*d.*, and the Chancellor had expenses in London, amounting to £6 10*s.*, apparently in connexion with the University privileges.

In 1477 there were further expenses at the Exchequer; £2 was borrowed for this purpose, and the Chancellor's expenses amounted to four marks. The matter may have been that the officials of the Exchequer laid upon the Chancellor the collection of a tenth. The University appealed to the King saying that it was a burden never imposed on the Chancellor before.[2] There was also a dispute about the assise of bread and ale.[3] In this year a new copy of the Statutes was made, and there is payment for the binding of it, the illumination, and the clasps. There seems to have been special disturbance when the judges and other strangers came to Oxford; a sum of 24*s.* was spent in keeping order, and a friar was killed. Life was not safe at this time. The accounts tell us that two Bachelors were wounded in 1478, a servant of the Proctors killed in 1479, a priest injured in 1488. The Oriel accounts tell us that a clerk of Brasenose Hall was killed in 1474, and a deed at Bridgwater mentions the murder of Thomas Ludlow, sub-bailiff of Oxford, in 1491.

The accounts for 1478 are the most interesting of the series. In January the University wrote to the Bishop of London saying that the School of Theology, though begun long ago was maimed (mancus) and almost neglected, entreating his aid.[4] In the accounts we find that Thomas Karver was paid twenty shillings for his expenses in soliciting the Bishop of London to complete the work, so that we may assume that he carried the letter. On February 12 a letter was written to Oxford by Thomas Chaundeler, who was Chancellor of the University, declaring the good intentions of the Bishop of London.[5] On May 6 the University sent to the bishop a statute that had been passed, ordaining the observance of the commemoration of the Kempes[1]; no doubt this was the substance of the letters patent which was written out at a cost of 8*d.* We read of a journey to Hinksey where the Chancellor, the Commissary, and many others treated about the intention of the Bishop of London to complete the School of Theology. If it is asked why the meeting was at Hinksey, the answer may be that the itinerant judges had to be consulted. There is an entry that the Proctors journeyed to Hinksey to obtain the good-will of the judges, probably the itinerant judges for Berkshire, who usually held their court in that part of Grampound which was in Berkshire, in the parish of Hinksey. Two horses were hired at a cost of 12*d.* to visit the Chancellor about the oath of William Orchard; evidently the Chancellor was not far away, and as there is evidence that this was a year of severe plague he may have been in a neighbouring village. William Orchard is known to have been the architect and builder of much of Magdalen College, and the evidence is increasing which shows that he was the architect of all the chief buildings of Oxford that were erected between 1460 and 1504, the date of his death. There can be little doubt that the initials W. O., which occur more than once on the roof of the Divinity School, stand for William Orchard. We do not know why an oath was required from him; perhaps the Bishop of London desired that he should take an oath to complete the work within a certain date. There is also a payment to Boswell, the beadle, for a journey that he made to the King about masons. This must have been when he carried to the King a letter written by the University on February 24, 1479, asking that he should not summon to Windsor the masons who had finished their work at Magdalen College, but should allow the University to engage them.[2]

The accounts of 1479 twice record that there was a crowd of visitors at Oxford when 'magister Leonellus' (i. e. Wydeville) took his degree. In March or April the University had sent him a letter, announcing that a grace had been passed in his favour that he should be 'licenced in decrees', but not obliged to incept.[3] Among those who came to see the sight was his nephew, Richard Grey. In this year Doctor Robert Halle gave Wolstan Hall to the University,[4] and our accounts show the legal expenses and the consumption of wine when possession was obtained.

In 1481 there was much building at Beef Hall amounting to £23, and the Southern Proctor was paid £1 for supervising the work. Apparently the hall was improved, for the rent was raised slightly. For the School of Canon Law twenty-one cart-loads of stone were bought, but no building was begun. The King visited the University and stayed at Magdalen on Sunday, September 23; his mother also came and his sister, the Duchess of Suffolk. Another visitor was dominus Stanley, no doubt Thomas Stanley, first Earl of Derby. In this year wine was given to dominus Edwardus and magister Iacobus Stanley; the latter is James Stanley, sixth son of Thomas Stanley, born about 1465, who was Bishop of Ely from 1506 to 1515, having been Archdeacon of Richmond from 1500 to 1506[1]; the former is Edward Pole, son of John de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, who married the sister of Edward IV; Suffolk was at this time Steward of the University. Both in the Proctors' Accounts and in the letter in which the University thanks the King for sending Pole and Stanley to Oxford[2] we find that Stanley is called magister, while Pole who was of royal blood is merely dominus. It is obvious that Stanley, if born in 1465, cannot have been Master of Arts in 1481, and in the letter of the University he is definitely described as a youth. Perhaps Stanley had already begun his course of Arts and is therefore given the title magister, whereas Pole was still studying grammar. There is some uncertainty about the subsequent career of Edward Pole. In the Dictionary of National Biography he is in one place identified with Edmund Pole who was executed in 1513; in another place he is identified with Edward Pole who was made Archdeacon of Richmond in 1485 and died soon after. As he was a younger brother of Edmund, he cannot have been more than eight at this time. On June 24, 1481, Magdalen gave a feast 'to the sons of Suffolk and Stanley'.[3] There were meetings with the Chancellor, Lionel Wydeville, at Abingdon and at Cumnor; it has yet to be discovered what his connexion was with Abingdon.

In 1482 there is the purchase of 107 loads of stone for the School of Canon Law; they were bought from mag. Will. Horcherd, in other words, William Orchard the builder and architect, who tells us in his will in the Chancellor's Register that he owned a quarry at Headington. He is generally styled magister as a mark of respect. The Chancellor, though now Bishop of Salisbury, still seems to be living at Cumnor, and was given wine there on three occasions. William Orchard rides to the Bishop of London probably to consult him about the vaulting of the Divinity School. The coats of arms show that it was set up about 1482,[1] and as the Bishop of London was supplying the money he may have been consulted about the plan. The entry about 'removing books in the library' cannot mean the transference of books from the old library to the new, for a letter which seems to be of October 1488 states[2] that even then the new library was not ready for books.

[2] Ep. Ac., p. 478.
[3] Reg. of Magd. Coll., p. 7 (ed. Macray).

In the accounts of 1488 there is mention of a visit to Oxford paid by Henry VII. The same visit is mentioned in the accounts at Magdalen[3] between Michaelmas 1487 and Michaelmas 1488. We can, therefore, now assert that the visit was between April 16 and September 29, 1488. It was in this year that the School of Canon Law was rebuilt,[4] but it has left no trace in the Proctors' Accounts.

In the accounts of 1496 there is mention that Prince Arthur paid two visits to Oxford. They are also mentioned in the accounts of Magdalen College between Michaelmas 1495 and Michaelmas 1496.[5] The Bishops of Lincoln and Lichfield paid three visits to Oxford, and there was an outlay of £2 13*s.* 4*d.* over 'abbots, priors and gentlemen'. Perhaps this was when St. Mary's church was opened again, after rebuilding.

[1] This cannot mean that the Divinity School had a thatched roof. If such an idea was possible, the sums here mentioned are much too small for such a work, and four or five years later the walls were still in building. Probably it means that, as the University had no funds, the walls were thatched to keep them dry. It will be noticed that no other money was spent on the New Schools in this year.

[2] On May 3, 1464, John Bourchier of Berners, knight, John Wenlok of Wenlok, knight, and Robert Harecourt, knight, were appointed on a commission to array the king's subjects in Oxfordshire and the four neighbouring counties (Cal. of Pat. Rolls, p. 391).

[1] No doubt the re-election of Lionel Woodville to the post of Chancellor, which would normally have taken place about May 1481. Woodville, who became Bishop of Salisbury in 1482, was in charge of the temporalities from Nov. 1481, and had held canonries in the Cathedral for more than ten years. He seems to have resided much at Abingdon, which at that time was in the diocese of Salisbury.

[2] Probably this is identical with Theodoric Rote, one of the first printers at Oxford. He is called Dedych Teutonicus in a register at Magdalen (Reg. of Magd. Coll., p. 10, ed. Macray), while in a rental of 1480 he is Dyryke Dowcheman (Cart. of Hosp. St. John, iii. 272). It may seem strange that a printer should be a goldsmith; but to cut seals was part of the work of a goldsmith, and to cut the founts for type was part of the work of a printer. Many of the early printers worked in partnership with goldsmiths or silversmiths.

Compotus dictorum procuratorum de datis et receptis Uniuersitati ad usum edificacionis ecclesie beate Marie virginis, anno supradicto

In primis idem reddunt compotum de XL quercubus[1] ex dono

[1] The King is thanked for this timber in a letter of May 1488 (Ep. Ac., p. 526).

Illustrissimi Regis Henrici septimi datis Uniuersitati ad dictum usum habendis in Shotouer cum ramis, frondibus, putaminibusque omnibus aliis, anglice cum toppes & loppes, ex concensu domini Edmundi Rede militis, ibidem locumtenentis, que quidem quercus in Shotouer abcisi [sic] adhuc remanent.

Item pro ramis, frondibus, putaminibusque omnibus aliis venditis Alano Rede per dictos procuratores xxvi s. viii d.

Item ex dono venerabilis viri magistri Thome Coper bacallarii in sacra pagina xl s.

Summa receptorum iii lib. vi s. viii d.; unde petunt allocari pro regardis, abcisione quercuum una cum aliis circa dictum meremium expensis factis xxvii s. i d. ob.

Et sic remanent Uniuersitati ad dictum usum xxxix s. vi d. ob., de qua summa soluerunt iudicibus xii s. x d. ob. & remanent in manibus eorum, scilicet Hosey & Caseleghe xxvi s. viii d., ad dictum usum, de quibus habent compotare procuratoribus anni presentis.

Nos doctores et magistri, iudices auctoritate venerabilis congregationis deputati & super stricta examinatione iurati &c., audito & intellecto compoto procuratorum dictorum, percepimus & nouimus ex relacione & testimonio non solum dictorum procuratorum verum etiam & aliorum fidedignorum, quod commissarius detinet seu detinere presumit arma quedam inuasiua & defensiua ad valorem magni precii viz. bryganders &c. Universitati pertinencia & nobis iudicibus tempore compoti presentanda; preterea, iuxta tenorem statutorum dicta concernencium, inquisitione strictaque examinatione per nos facta in hiis que personam Commissarii circa pacem conservandam concernunt, reperimus & probabiliter nouimus quod dictus Commissarius non erat diligens in rebellium punitione & pacis obseruacione; ideoque proprias consciencias disonerando auctoritate statutorum nobis commissa in hac parte decernimus & ipsum condempnamus ad dictorum restitutionem armorum Uniuersitati infra 10 dies a tempore congricionis[1] sub pena periurii quam nos decernimus eum incurrere eo facto. Insuper priuamus premissa auctoritate dictum Commissarium omni parte armorum sibi aliquo iure statutorum competent' cum minus diligens repertus fuerit & ei perpetuum silencium circa peticionem dictorum armorum vel aliqua parte [sic] eorum imponimus sub pena premissa &c.

[1] The word is so written. I cannot suggest a meaning.

Quia vero postea dictus Commissarius in plena congregatione magistrorum regencium sacramento prestito ac nullo testium contradicente, innocentiam suam in premissis sufficienter declarauit, propterea nos prefati iudices ex maioris partis nostrum consensu eundem Commissarium dictorum criminum immunem, insuper a sententia necnon condempnatione suprascriptis absolui debere ac absolutum fore iusticia suadente pronunciamus, supradictis sentencia et condempnatione in aliquo non obstantibus.[1]
